Chess players from the Beaumont Chess Club bested members of the Lake Charles Chess Club by a score of 5½ to 4½ in tournament play held in the Prien Lake Mall, Saturday.

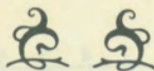

The Beaumont club took four wins and three draws, while the Lake Charles group garnered three wins and three draws.

Ten games were played during the seven-hour tournament. There were to be ten players on each team, but when a third board player did not arrive, the fourth board player played the two games.

The teams will schedule a rematch during the summer.

The above list of people represents some very generous folks who really are helping support chess in Texas. These GREAT PERSONS have contributed at least $25 each per year to help out the official Texas Chess Association publication, Texas Knights. Bulk mailing Texas Knights has just gone up from 10.9¢ an issue to 11¢, and the printing costs don't come all that cheap. YOU, too, can be listed with the PATRONS above for as little as $25/year (so what's $25? Just a couple of movies and popcorn!) Send John Chapman, Treasurer of TCA, 1009 W. Louisa, Iowa Park, Tx 76367, a check for $25 (or more, if you're in the mood), and we'll send your Texas Knights first class, display your name in the PATRONS lineup, and be MOST appreciative of your contribution.

BROWNE, CHRISTIANSEN, DZINDZICHASHVILI TIE IN U.S. CHAMPIONSHIP

The U.S. Championship tournament at Thiel College, Greenville, Pennsylvania ended July 31 in a three-way tie. Grandmasters (GMs) Walter Browne of Berkeley, Calif., Larry Christiansen of Los Angeles, and Roman Dzindzichashvili of Corona, N.Y., all scored 9-4 in the roundrobin and were declared co-champions. Each was undefeated, with five wins and eight draws, and each earned $3,500.

Browne, 34, has now finished on top in his last six Championship tries, winning outright in 1974, 1975, and 1977, and tying in 1980 and 1981 as well as 1983. He was near the lead throughout this tournament, although after nine rounds he was a full point behind Christiansen and half a point behind Dzindzichashvili. Successive wins over GMs Andrew Soltis and Lev Alburt then brought him into a first place tie with Christiansen, and draws with International Masters (IMs) Nick deFirmian (in 107 moves) and Joel Benjamin kept him there.

Christiansen, 27, tied for the Championship in 1980. He moved into a tie with Dzindzichashvili in round 7 by beating Benjamin, took a clear lead in round 9 with a win over IM Sergey Kudrin, and maintained it by holding a draw in a difficult game against "Dzindzi" in the tenth round. Draws with GM Anatoly Lein, IM Dmitry Gurevich, and deFirmian finished out his tournament and left him with a share of first place.

Dzindzichashvili, 39, a Soviet emigre by way of Israel, was playing in his first U.S. Championship. He crushed early leader Benjamin in round 4, but draws in rounds 6 through 12 left him half a point behind the leaders. A last round win over GM James Tarjan, who was off-form throughout the event, pulled "Dzindzi" into the tie for first.

DeFirmian's score of 8-5 earned him a clear fourth place, worth $2,000. He "made his move" late in the tournament, beating Alburt in round 10 (after adjournment) and Gurevich in the eleventh round, before drawing with Browne and Christiansen (the latter in an extremely hard-fought game) at the end. This was the first Championship appearance for the 26-year-old resident of Oakland, Calif.

Among the other players, Benjamin and Gurevich both started 3-0 but finished barely above 50%. The showings of Soltis and Jay Whitehear (seeded for winning respectively the 1982 U.S. Open Championship and the 1981 Junior Championship) were better than many observers had anticipated. Tarjan's tie for last place was an extreme disappointment for the highest rated player in the U.S.

The people of Thiel College and Greenville made the players feel at home. Tournament Director Richard Verber was pleased with the high level of fighting chess which was exhibited throughout the tournament. (Winners of the five special game prizes will be announced later this week.) All the tournament bulletins can be obtained from the Center for Lifelong Learning, Thiel College, Greenville, PA 16125, for only $7.

The Championship was co-sponsored by U.S. Chess and Thiel College, with assistance from the American Chess Foundation and the Piatigorsky Foundation.

KRIEGSPIEL - DALLAS RULES

(Editor's note: J. C. Thompson, creator of the Texas Chess Association, has favored us with the rules and some explanation of the chess variant Kriegspiel. As opposed to "pure" Kriegspiel, his game uses modifications which came to be known as "Dallas Rules" due to the city of their origination. I sometimes think we overlook very pleasurable pastimes such as this in our all-consuming passion for competitive chess. Give this a try when you have a little free time.)

So, what is Kriegspiel? and why Dallas rules? Please read on. Kriegspiel is a fascinating offshoot of the Royal Game that can enliven many a club meeting. Besides being a lot of fun, it develops imagination; the possibilities are endless.

To play Kriegspiel (German for "war Game") you need two players, three sets of chessmen, and a referee. The players sit with their backs to each other and the referee sits between them and keeps the correct position of the game, for, you see, in Kriegspiel you usually don't know exactly where your opponent's pieces are.

To give a short illustration, suppose

White	Referee	Black
1 P-K4	"White has moved"	P-Q4
	"Black has moved and White has a pawn capture on Q5"
2 PxP	"White captures on Q5"	QxP
	"Black recaptures"

Now, at the moment, White knows the exact position, but Black doesn't, because White's first move might have been 1 P-QB4.

3 Q-N4

A bold gamble. White is hoping that Black will be fearing a pawn attack on his Queen (3 P-QB4) which is very likely.

"White has moved."	Q-QB3
"Black has moved."
"White mates."

Now, if Black were the adventurous type he might have played 3...B-N5, hoping to play 4...BxQ, but, of course, he would have snared White's Queen by 3...B-N5.

Usually Kriegspiel games are not so dramatic. You try to avoid pawn attacks, since the referee announces them. And you try to build up an attack against the enemy King. One of the amusing things about Kriegspiel is that you may be amassing your pieces on the King's side but your opponent's King is nestling comfortably on the Queen's side of the board.

One favorite method of development for White is 1 P-KR4, 2 P-QR4, 3 R-QR3, 4 QR-KR3, preparing a King's side attack. The trouble with this line of play is that your opponent may be playing 1...P-K4, 2...B-B4, 3...Q-B3, and 4...QxBP mate.

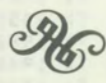

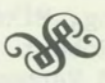

But what are the Dallas rules? In pure Kriegspiel, the referee announces only the basic moves - "White has moved, Black has moved, White captures on a certain square, White is in check on the long diagonal, or the short diagonal, or on the file or on the rank, or from a Knight." The Dallas rules speed up the game a great deal. In pure Kriegspiel, you have to ask the referee each time, "Do I have a pawn capture?" abbreviated to "Any?" to which the reply is either "Try," or "Neny." If you try successfully you have to make the capture.

The other important Dallas rule is that the referee announces why you can't make a certain move, for so many reasons. For example, if your Bishop is on KN2 and you try to move him to QR8, and there are three pawns or pieces in between, the referee will say, "No, for three reasons." Obviously, this is very useful information. In one of my games, my opponent was on the move and the referee said, "No, for four reasons." I thought about this for a few minutes and it became obvious that he was trying to move his King to a certain square, which was a dead giveaway. It showed me where his King was and I was able to launch a successful attack.

Most of these rules were from the fertile brain of Frank Harold McKee, a strong Dallas player and several times President of the Texas Chess Association.

When the USCF Opens were played in Dallas in 1940 and 1942, the Dallas players mowed down all the Kriegspiel competition. Of course, we played under the Dallas rules, but they don't change the basic idea of Kriegspiel. They just make it more interesting.

This is the last issue of TK the Simms will be putting out! I can't say it's been a lot of fun, but maybe we've done our part for Texas Chess. We have many people to thank for their contributions (this issue it was J. C. Thompson, Mike Fleming, Mike Moore, Clarence Callaway, Robert Jaster, Bill Snead, Richard Verber, and the excellent Chess 'n Stuff periodical.) Most people don't seem to realize that by putting in half an hour a month sending in results and news they can assure a much better Texas Knights....Late US Open news: Pasadena draws record 820 with top board being Korchnoi! 9 GMs, 11 IMs, 102 Masters. Reshevsky, Seirawan, Christiansen, Bisguier, etc. Word was that Bisguier had suffered a serious illness recently but is evidently okay now. Korchnoi leading at the half.... Apologies to Wilson Neil; didn't get your interesting Keres game in.... Just got word of a 2-day event in Corpus Christi Nov. 12-13, '83. July Quads there were won by Garcia/Bernheim(2-1), Medina(2½-½), Mohn(3-0), Powers(3-0), and Onstott(3-0). Garcia (1933) defeated both Willis(2090) and Hardy(2190)!...Midland tourney August 6-7 won by Tom Kayma(4½-½), Klaus Cat I(4-1), Russell/Ralph Cat II(4-1), Gafford Cat III(3½-½), Cope Cat IV (2-3). 25 players....Infusion of enthusiasm gets Amarillo Panhandle Open to a $1000 prize fund regardless of how many show up. You strong players just stay downstate and let me take care of the hometown business!.... The big news, as always this time of year, is the Southwest Open. It's returned to the 7-round format so we will get in a lot of chess in a short time. Looks like Ivanov will be back this year to glom onto more Grand Prix points. Nice playing site at the SA Marriott North again....Anybody interested in setting a Reshevsky tour in Texas contact me. This grand old man of chess has said he is interested. 30 board simul minimum at $12/board.

ACE SPRING OPEN

THE ACE SPRING OPEN held April 30-May 1 in Austin, drew a strong turnout, with seven masters competing (Bradford, Kuroda, Boctor, Bone, Zeigler, Pudinszky, and Calogridis). The average rating in the OPEN sections was 2016, with 37 players. There was a surprising low turnout in the UNDER 1800 section, with only 26 players competing. Congratulations to the following players who took prizes:

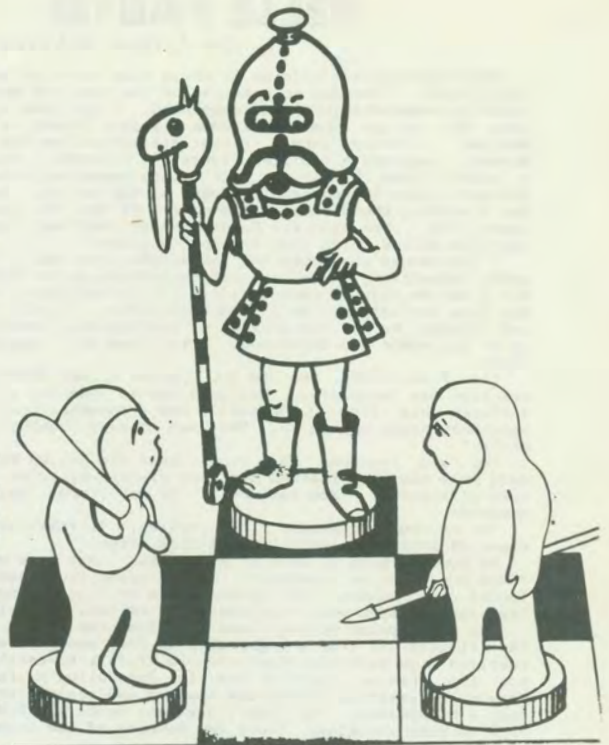

Bradford, Kuroda, Lee (1st). Cheyne, (1st-Cat. I)
Bridges, Rapier Computer (1st-below 1800). Thompson
(1st-Cat. III)

BELLE PARTIE

by Arthur Belliveau

When the mechanic told me it would take about an hour to service my car, I decided to make use of the time and grab a quick sandwich somewhere in the neighborhood. I had gone about a block from the garage when a sudden downpour forced me to look for shelter. I ducked into a rather sleazy-looking bar. Glancing around, I noticed a familiar figure in a booth. Harvey Miller! I hadn't seen Harvey for over twenty years and this chance encounter, like the nostalgic impact of old movies, brought back for a moment, those wonderful memories of the St. Cyprian Street Chess Club. Was this the Harvey Miller who had toppled the invincible Julius Wolfe that evening long ago?

I approached the booth and sat across from him. "Harvey?" I asked tentatively. He was nursing a drink as he looked up at me but I saw no sign of recognition. I figured Harvey would be in his late forties but he looked much older. Frail, bleary-eyed, and unkempt, he was the picture of the typical alcoholic, passed up by the world and forgotten. "You know me?" he asked wonderingly.

Then I mentioned the old St. Cyprian Street Chess Club. The reaction was immediate. His eyes opened wide and a slow smile suffused his face. "Oh sure! Now I remember you." He seemed genuinely happy to see me, "We used to play together once in a while."

"Do you remember the time I beat old Julius Wolfe?" As he said this his hand reached over and grasped my wrist. His eyes were glistening. "You remember?" He was almost begging me to remember.

"Of course, I remember.", I replied, "I still have the notations of that game and I go over them often."

He now had hold of both of my wrists. His face was radiant. "Good God! You do remember!" As his grasp tightened, his eyes looked way beyond the dismal walls of that shabby barroom and the years slipped away from him as he smiled, child-like.

The St. Cyprian Street Chess Club does not exist now but in the fifties it had a membership of over two hundred. It was a bustling club with the usual mixture of fair-to-excellent players but the shining light of the club was Julius Wolfe. Wolfe had played for years in Europe and America and claimed to have beaten many a grandmaster. We didn't have any proof of his assertions but, be that as it may, very few members of the club could wrestle a draw, let alone win from him.

But one night, in a tournament game, a rather mediocre wood pusher named Harvey Miller outplayed Julius Wolfe in a game that should be in the golden treasury of chess.

"I've got to tell you the whole story of that game," a tear rolled down Harvey's cheek, "I've told it to others but they didn't believe me. Maybe you will." His eyes were miles away, reliving that game. He looked like a small kid begging for a favor.

I remember it well. The tournament game between Wolfe and Miller had been a postponed one and since the tournament was practically over, most of us were idle and quite a few had gathered to watch this game. Even with a push-over like Miller, Wolfe was always interesting to watch. We looked forward to some fancy wood shifting.

"It was a great game," I said to Harvey, "about ten guys were watching and each move seemed more amazing than the preceding one, and when you sacrificed the queen...you really had him reeling...it was an outstanding brilliancy."

Harvey was savoring every word I uttered. He had released his grip on my wrists and settled back in his seat. But then he said the thing that made me wonder about his sanity.

"I had help with that game," he said softly, "I didn't win that game alone."

"What do you mean, you had help?" I exclaimed, "I watched the whole game. No one collaborated with you."

"Yes," he said in a calm, matter-of-fact tone, "someone did, but you couldn't see them."

"Them?" I looked at him carefully. Had Harvey Miller really flipped?

"I'll have to start from the beginning." Harvey's eyes, staring out in the distance, glistened like those of a religious fanatic.

"The night of the tournament game," began Harvey, "I dropped in at Hack Brown's for my supper and a few beers. You remember Hack? He dropped in at the club once in a while. He tried to cheer me up but it was no use; I felt already beaten."

"I was eating my ham and cheese at a table and I was wondering if it wouldn't be better to forget the whole thing and just forfeit the game, when I noticed I had been joined across the table by a small dark man who was smiling and evidently wanted to be friendly."

"I couldn't help overhearing what you said to the bartender", he said, "and I was wondering if you'd like some help. How would you like to win that game tonight?"

"I looked at the guy carefully. 'You a chess player?' I asked?"

"I've played some," the little guy answered, "But that's not the issue here. How would you like to have Capablanca help you tonight?"

"Capablanca? Either this guy was a fruitcake or somebody at the club was trying to pull a fast one. I decided to play it dumb."

"Of course I'd like to have Capablanca help me. Who wouldn't? But Capablanca's been dead for many years and I'm afraid he won't be of much help to me tonight."

"The little stranger kept smiling and held out his hand. 'My name is Max Gorbelt and I knew Capablanca very well,' he continued, 'I'm sure he'd help you if I asked him.'"

"I decided to go along with the gag and shook hands with him. 'It's OK by me,' I said, 'I sure would like to have Capablanca helping me tonight. The game's at eight sharp.' The little fellow smiled happily and before I knew it, he was gone."

Still debating with myself whether I should forfeit the game or no, I finally made up my mind; oh snucks! It's only a chess game. I'll take my punishment and give the guys a good laugh. I started out for the club."

Twenty-three years is a long time but I can still picture Harvey Miller, a green kid from the sticks, matched against the polished cosmopolite, Julius Wolfe.

The game started on schedule but from the very first moves it was apparent that this game was going to be far off the beaten track. Harvey, playing Black, was using the Gruenfeld Defense! Where the heck had Harvey picked that up? When Harvey fianchettoed his king's bishop, I noticed a slight frown on Julius' usually placid face. I don't know exactly what a beatific look means but the relaxed, blissful expression on Harvey Miller's face as he nonchalantly answered Julius Wolfe's moves made me wonder if he wasn't under the influence of some potent drug.

Now back to Harvey's version of that night...

"We had no sooner sat down," said Harvey, "when I noticed a good-looking Spanish-looking gentleman in a double-breasted serge suit--you know, the kind they were wearing in the twenties. He was smiling as he neared the table. He raised a warning finger, 'Don't try to speak to me; that would only startle your neighbors who can't see nor hear me. Just listen to my directions.' Like being hit with a baseball bat, it came to me: it was Capablanca!"

"Was this really happening? Somehow I came out of the daze when, noticing Julius Wolfe staring at the board, I realized he'd made the first move. He'd played N-KB3. Now now in hell do you answer a move like that? Capablanca smiled; 'Just do the same thing,' he said softly, 'play N-KB3.' I did as he said and when Wolfe played P-QB4, Capablanca looked at me friendly like; 'Relax,' he said, 'don't worry. He'll weaken later.'

"He seemed to be enjoying the whole thing immensely when I noticed he'd been joined by a small man wearing a suit that must have been fashioned by Abraham Lincoln's tailor...the old steel engravings in the chess books flashed before my eyes...Paul Morphy! He and Capablanca seemed to be old friends as they discussed the position on the board. One would nod as the other suggested a move with appropriate hand gestures; then the roles were reversed. They were always very attentive to each other's suggestions and there were long deliberations before one or the other would finally approach and indicate the move."

"What sort of necromancy had Max Gorbelt performed? How had he conjured these two ghosts from the past? How could I see and hear them while my opponent and the bystanders were deaf and blind to my two collaborators? I was living on two different levels; in two different worlds. It all seemed quite natural to listen to these two courteous shadows who were gently showing me each move and it also seemed quite natural to be in the present day world of Julius Wolfe and the club on St. Cyprian Street."

"I didn't know what I was doing but I was having the time of my life. On the ninth move, when my knight attacked his queen, it was a great feeling to see old Julius backpedaling. He was sweating, trying to find a good move."

"A few moves later, I noticed that Capablanca and Morphy had been joined by two other men whom I didn't recognize at first. The two newcomers, when discussing a move with Morphy, would address him in French. All four seemed to be adept in several languages for I'd hear English, German and occasionally, Spanish. When I heard Morphy addressing the big man as Doctor, I sensed that this must be the great Alekhine! This wasn't all! I later heard one of them address the last arrival as Herr Nimzovich! Had Max Gorbelt recalled anymore? I had four masters helping me! True, the moves weren't mine, but to be an intermediary for these great stars was a feeling that cannot be described. To be seated in a game and moving the pieces for the great immortals was a once-in-a-lifetime thing."

"I had my doubts, however, when Capablanca, with that pleasant smile insisted I leave my queen en prise by Wolfe's bishop. When my opponent, on the seventeenth move, gobbled my queen, Morphy and Alekhine broke into wide grins. Capablanca was impassive but he watched the board intently, his eyes seemingly sweeping all sixty-four squares simultaneously. On the next move, when my white-squared bishop captured his bishop and gave check, I could see the beginning of the end. I must say, however, that in all justice to Julius Wolfe, he must have been a great player to have held out as long as he did against those four. On the other hand, he thought he was playing Harvey Miller, but if he had known who his opponents were, he might have resigned much earlier in the game. Seesawing my knights and bishop against his helpless king was the greatest! On the 41st move, when I clobbered Julius with R-QB7 mate!, I could see Morphy and Alekhine grabbing each other and laughing. Nimzovich's eyes were all admiration! 'Belle partie!' he said to Morphy. Capablanca waved with a smile and they were gone."

"I remember vaguely, shaking hands with Wolfe and being congratulated by some of the members, but I was still out of this world. So that's how it's done! From now on all I had to do was sit with the masters at my side and every chess game was mine. No effort at all and I'd be a grandmaster in no time. I finally dozed off late that night dreaming of my coming conquest of the world of chess."

"Early in the morning I rushed down to Hack Brown's place. I had to see Max Gorbelt and tell him about the game! But, speaking to Hack, I began to have a queer feeling. Hack didn't know Max Gorbelt, had never heard of him, and couldn't remember anyone answering the description I gave him."

"For the past twenty years I've checked city directories all over New England but not only is there no trace of the Max Gorbelt I knew, he doesn't seem to have ever existed. Oh, I've found several Max Gorbelts. One was a blond giant of twenty and another was a ninety year oldster who thought chess was a card game. The Max Gorbelt I met in Hack Brown's place has just vanished!"

As Harvey finished his strange story he slunk back into his pathetic shell and the listless look I had first noticed. He slouched over his drink.

"Oh, I know, you think I'm just an old rummy who's off his rocker," he said sadly, "but what I've told you is what I saw and heard the night I played Julius Wolfe."

Who knows? Who can say Harvey Miller was crazy? All I know is that I saw him play Wolfe and when you look over the notation of that game of years ago you can't help but feel that someone else other than Harvey Miller was moving the chess pieces that night."

I looked in on Harvey a few times after that and he was progressively going downhill. When I noticed the short obit announcing that Harvey Miller, age 47, had died, I was not surprised.

1st SA Class Championship Results- 55 players turned out at the Broadway Plaza Hotel to compete in this 4 round, 5 section event. Held on June 25-26, the Open section saw the largest participation with a total of 16 players. This section consisted of mostly Candidate Masters. Sharing top honors in this section with 3 points each were: SA Master Jack Ligon(2220), Thomas Keffer(2205) from New Mexico, Pat Gannon(2110), SA club president Tony Alston(2053), and the surprise of the tournament William Gray(1945) who also managed 3 out of 4 for points! They each took home $65 for there fine results. Also present in the Open section was Mitchell White. Mitchell, a candidate master who grew up in the San Antonio area, has completed his Phd in chemistry at Utah. He is now working at Lake Jackson, near Houston. It was good to see him back in the Texas chess scene!

The other four section posted the following results:

Section 2-	Under 2000	1st & 2nd	Andy Smith	3.5 pts.	$87.50
			Stephen Cheyney	3.5 pts.	$87.50
	Under 1900	1st	Philip Fetler	2.5pts.	$50.00

Congradulations to everyone!

SA Championship Results- John Cline, Austin Master(2350) and law student, went undefeated with a 5-0 score to take clear firstand the $125 first place prize. The event was held July 23&24 at the Broadway Plaza Hotel. John played excellent chess and defeated Jack Ligon, Tony Alston, and Teo Furtado, who are all rated over 2000.

As far as the City Champion goes, the highest scorer who is a resident of San Antonio is declared the city champion for 1983. This year, Randall Schwarz and Andy Smith both tied for the honor by scoring 4 points each. Since Randall (2055) had the better tiebreaks, he will hold the Pete Prattes Memorial Trophy for one year! The trophy will have the names of both players engraved on it as SA city champs for 1983. Next year the new city champ will hold the trophy for a year. The trophy will be presented in cermonies during this year Southwest Open.

Other winners in this years tournament were:

2nd&3rd	Teo Furtado and Mitchell White	4 pts.
Cat. I	Stan Rapport	3 1/2 pts.
Cat. II	Mike Machado	2 1/2 pts.
	Wayne Griffin
Cat. III	Mark Adams	2 1/2 pts.
Cat. 4, 5, unr	Wallace Short	2 pts.
	Mithcell Poe
	Claude Swearingen

Local Junior takes Mobile Prize- Mark Adams, who recently graduated from high school here, won 1st place and $120 in the 1200-1600 section of the Summer Chess Olympics held July 9&10 in Mobile, Alabama. Mark scored 4 1/2 out of 5 to take the medal, trophy, and money over 24 others in his section. Congradulations Mark!

The Texas Speed Championship, a six-round (two games per round) Swiss, was held on Sunday night, July 3, after the fourth round of the Lone Star Open. Fourteen players participated, including six Experts. Winner on tiebreaks with 9½-2½ was David King (2130) over Bob Leininger (2087). The Under-2000 prize was taken by Gary Hewitt (1975) with a score of 7-5.

About a year later, when I had almost forgotten Harvey, my eye caught an item in an old chess publication that brought the whole weird story back with a jolt. One of my granddaughters, ever on the alert to please her chess-playing grandfather had picked a small assortment of battered chess books at a tag sale and sent them to me. Leafing through a scruffy little volume entitled, Anecdotes and Oddments of Chess, the names in a small article leaped from the page. "A man was once accused of slaying his opponent in a chess game," the article began. "In 1921, in a heated argument over a chess game in Solinger, Germany, two students engaged in a scuffle and one student, Max Gorbel, was killed when he fell or was flung down a flight of stairs. The other student, Julius Wolfe, was exonerated on a charge of manslaughter. The death was ruled an accident."

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet chess star Garri Kasparov, who forfeited a world title qualifying contest in a dispute over two match sites, predicted Sunday that champion Anatoly Karpov would refuse to play unless the games are rescheduled.

Kasparov also said in a telephone interview that he was disappointed about being denied a chance so far to challenge Karpov, who was a fellow Soviet.

"I wanted very much to play; it is very important to me," said Kasparov, 20, speaking from his home in Baku, on the Caspian Sea.

HE BLAMED Florencio Campomanes, president of the International Chess Federation, and not the Soviet authorities who would not let him attend his semifinal match.

Kasparov had been scheduled to play Saturday in Pasadena, Calif., against Soviet defector Victor Korchnoi. The Soviets said in advance that Kasparov would not play, claiming there were security problems in Pasadena. He was declared in default one hour after Korchnoi made his opening move.

Soviet chess authorities also said Vasily Smyslov would not go to Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates capital, to play a semifinal against Hungarian Zoltan Ribli.

Abu Dhabi withdrew as host, the match was not held Saturday and Campomanes said in Pasadena that he had not decided whether to rule a Soviet forfeit.

The Soviet Union had offered to play in Abu Dhabi if the federation moved the Pasadena match to Rotterdam, Netherlands, or to the Canary Islands, but Campomanes refused.

Kasparov, asked if he thought Karpov would play the winner of a Korchnoi-Ribli match, replied:

"I don't think he will. He wants to play, but by the established rules. I'm not sure of course, and it's not only up to him. It's up to the (Soviet chess federation) and Campomanes."

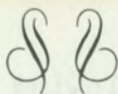

Kasparov said he did not think the matter was closed, in apparent allusion to the Soviet offer to arrange an independent semifinal.

"It's only beginning," he said, without elaborating.

ASKED ABOUT the possibility of a solution satisfying both sides, Kasparov replied, "The time has passed for a compromise. We offered a compromise earlier. Now it is up to Campomanes."

Kasparov said he is disappointed he could not play the semifinal. "The president of FIDE has made it impossible," he said, referring to the federation by its French acronym.

The Soviets contend that Campomanes should have changed the sites of the two matches in view of the objections by Kasparov and Smyslov, arguing that the grandmasters' preferences should take precedence.

SOLUTIONS TO COVER DIAGRAMS

- #1 Zenteno - Lynn Tall-in-Texas 1983 - White has just slammed down 1 h6 with authority. However it only draws against best play. 1 h6 Bh6! 2 Nh6 Kh6 3 Kd4 Kg5 4 Kd5 Kg4 5 Kc5 Kf5 6 Kb5 Ke6 7 Ka5 Kd7 8 Kb6 Kc8 drawing. This game was played by two Candidate Masters; this type of straight-line end-game calculation, although requiring accuracy, should be relatively simple for accomplished players. In the game, Black played 1...d4?? 2 Kd4 Kg4 3 h7 Ba3 4 Ke5 1-0
- #2 Kinabrew - Bradford Tall-in-Texas 1983 - Because of the undeveloped state of W's pieces, Black was able to play the scintillating (for us, humdrum for him!) 1...Nf2!! 0-1 Why did White resign?? Not being deeply into masochism, he declined to participate in 2 Rf2 Rcl 3 Rcl Rcl 4 Rf1 Be3 or 2 Kgl Ng4 3 Rel Rcl 4 Rac1 Rcl 5 Rcl Be3.
- #3 Usztan - Milburn Lone Star Open 1983 - See the game in this issue after 12 0-0.
- #4 Rector - Hall Lone Star Open 1983 - See the game in this issue after 29... Bf8.
- #5 Hubert - Davis Lone Star Open 1983 - In the game Black played 1...Qe5 and won shortly. In carefully calibrated tests however, Masters found the smothered mate in four with 1...Nf2! in an average of four nanoseconds. Learn the basic mates!
