A Message from the President

I would like to take this opportunity to again thank the members who supported me in my desire to serve TCA as president again. Just as in 1993-1996, I strongly believe my best contribution to this Association is nothing I do personally, but allowing other excellent people to serve well. In that light, I am overdue in telling you that Barb Swafford, our treasurer, has consistently performed for the TCA above and beyond what could ever be reasonably expected of her, and I would be lost without her. I also owe Drew Sarkisian a tremendous debt of gratitude for taking on the duties of Secretary at my request. Finally, if anyone had any doubt that Selby Anderson would once again create a great magazine, I refer you to the Jan-Feb 2007 issue, with articles to interest everyone from parents of scholastic players to fans of New Orleans chess entrepreneur (hustler?!) Jude Acers – and by the way, 14 pages of FIDE rated games from a round robin tournament.

Effective this month, I have asked Peter Kappler to take over the duties of the TCA webmaster. Peter replaces James Widener, who made a tremendous contribution to TCA by creating the TCA forums. I ask that each of you investigate these forums and address any requests or concerns you have for the organization there. As time progresses, TCA will come to rely more and more on the internet, and I believe the forums will only grow in importance. Here is the URL: <http://forum.texaschess.org/>

As most of you are probably aware, the annual Texas Scholastic Championships are upon us. This year they will return to the metroplex, at the Adams Mark Hotel in central Dallas. Luis Salinas, the Chief Tournament Director, has all the details you need at the tournament website: www.swchess.com/sce/tourney/tsc2007/tsc07.htm

I remember helping direct this tournament in Austin in 1992 – when there were about 225 students in the entire tournament. This year, the primary section alone will have 300 players or more. The growth of "junior chess" (what we called it in the "good ol' days") has been the big story of the TCA in the past 15 years. On that note, I would like to respond to Mr. Robert Rausch's remarks about chess teams (pp. 35 and 20 of the last issue).

I do not know for certain when USCF created its scholastic chess team rules, or what the basis of those rules was. I am more familiar with the TCA rules, which do not follow the USCF rules strictly. TCA's scholastic team rules were definitely not carved from granite in the 1970s. Those rules have constantly changed up to the present date. For example, the primary section did not exist in 1992, but was added in the 1990s at the suggestion of parents and chess coaches. There were few home-schooled students in the early days of the Junior (now Scholastic) tournament, and the home-school rules came about when those students became a larger percentage of the participants. And the rules that we have today have been created as the best, though not perfect, solutions to problems that Mr. Rausch has addressed, and others that he has not. The rules are a bit complicated, but based on simple principles. Yes, the rules treat some students differently – a sixth grader in a K-6 school will play in the elementary section, while a sixth grader at a 6-8 middle school section has to play in that section. The principle at work in this instance is the idea that a scholastic team, as much as possible, should be composed of students who attend the same school. Since there are many differences in the way Texas school districts divide their students among schools, some students of the same grades will end up playing in different sections. That is not so much TCA's decision as the decision of the local school district, being honored by TCA.

There are other principles at work. The high school section needs to be restricted to high school students because it will determine our participants in the Denker and Polgar tournaments. In addition, some students prefer playing in closed sections. I appreciate Mr. Rausch's concerns about the scholastic team rules, but I do not believe the solution is to redefine a team as including participants that don't go to the same school. Nonetheless, TCA is always tinkering with the scholastic rules and I invite anyone with suggestions for changes to participate in the TCA Junior Chess meeting, which will take place on the Saturday night of the tournament. That being said, please note that any changes will go into effect only at the next junior at the earliest.

My feelings about getting the UIL to sanction chess tournaments are much less ambivalent. Mr. Rausch states that "in spite of our best efforts" chess is not a UIL-sanctioned activity. Actually, it is because of our best efforts that TCA runs the scholastic, rather than UIL. I have to admit a prejudice against the UIL dating from the 80s when Joe Binder and I would take turns being ignored by the UIL at their annual meetings, with no consideration of proposals to include chess among the other scholastic competitions. I remember being called a "chess nut", behind my back of course, by some of the coaches who now ask their students to be at football practice at 6:30 a.m. But setting my feelings about UIL aside, chess is a bad fit for the type of tournament UIL wants to run. UIL is best at organizing single-elimination athletic tournaments in which one team is defeated every round. What to do, then, with a draw in a chess game? Shall we give black draw-odds, or have a speed game playoff? One is patently unfair, while the other will prolong a round in a system designed to be run on a schedule. That is the most obvious problem to me, but there are many others. It is better for juniors to play several games, rather than half the field only playing one game. Are there enough schoolteachers who know how to play chess – but also how to direct tournaments, set clocks, and the other things TDs have to know? UIL would not follow USCF rules, so the brand of "chess" that UIL tournaments would play would not be conducive to playing real chess. And students would not be able to win money in USCF tournaments because they would be disqualified from the UIL. In short, I don't think a UIL-run chess tournament is a bad idea; I think it's a whole slew of bad ideas.

But we might disagree on that; people often do. If you have some specific ideas to improve junior chess in general, or the scholastic in particular, again, please come to the TCA meeting. It will be held at 8:35 p.m. Saturday Mar. 17 at the Adams Mark Hotel in Dallas, in the Seminar Theater. By the way, if you are going please consider attending Dr. Alexey Root's program on Chess and Education: www.swchess.com/sce/tourney/tsc2007/cied.htm

I hope to see you at the meeting. For now, enjoy the rest of the issue. For the next issue, I'll briefly address the debate Dr. Root has been having with Susan Breeding about class prizes.

Michael M. Simpson

Retired as UTD chess director, not as prof

The last issue of Texas Knights [Nov-Dec 2006, p. 29] mistakenly reports that I am retiring from the University of Texas at Dallas. That is not the case.

I did step down after founding and serving for ten years as the Director of the UTD Chess Program. Jim Stallings became the new Director September 1.

I am more active than ever as Professor of Literary Studies, and I remain quite involved in the field of Chess and Education, with the USCF, and with FIDE. I have also resumed tournament play after many years absence, with dismal results so far. Think Tin Woodman when first discovered covered with rust.

The February issue of Texas Monthly features Rio Grande Valley chess prodigies Fernando Mendez and Fernando Spada of Brownsville ("Check Mates" by Katy Vine). The fourth graders are the nation's #5 and #6 nine-year-olds in the December 2006 USCF Rating List.

Texas team title forked over to Houston

The 2007 Texas team champions are the Houston-based Fork, the Other Knight Meat, comprised of FM Francisco Guadalupe, NM Mark Dejmeck, NM Chris Land and Robert Plunkett. They defeated last year's champs (Jimbo's Heros Ride Again, renamed Fleet Wood Hacks: Selby Anderson, John Patty, Jim Rohrbaugh and J.P. Hyltin) and ended with a tie match to UTD Alumni (Dennis Rylander, Ali Morshedi, Marc Furhmann, Clemente Rendon and Steve Young) for a winning score of 3.5 out of 4 match points. UTD Alumni finished in second place at 3 points, having tied their match with Fleet Wood Hacks.

The top Under 1900 team was Four Horsemen (Jose DeLeon, David Prevost, Juan Carrizales, Mike LaBelle) with 2 points, on tiebreaks over Team Conquest (Gregg Stanley, Martin Gordon, Daniel Lozano, Anthony Lozano). Top board Jose DeLeon (1814) continued his rating advance, drawing experts Shawn Noland and Brad Sawyer.

Fork cleaned up on the lower boards, with Land and Plunkett each scoring 3.5 for the top scores in boards 3 and 4. UTD had the best scores (3.0) on boards 1 and 2, with Dennis Rylander winning all three games that he played and Morshedi going 3-1.

There were nine teams, and the prizes (b/12) were cut to 75%. The turnout was about average, despite the lack of a Tournament Life Announcement in Chess Life. (We sent the TLA within deadline, but it evidently got lost somewhere in Crossville and we didn't follow up.)

Honorable mention for obscure team name reference goes to Lonely Day (Brad Sawyer, Paul Haney, Jesse Lozano and Anthony Guerra). The music video for "Lonely Day" by System of a Down, available on YouTube among other sites; has chess in a minor cameo role. (On a related subject, check out the video of "Unlevel" by San Antonio-based group Buttercup, where chess has more than an incidental role.)

Martin Gordon directed the event, held Jan. 27-28 at the Texas Neurosciences Institute in San Antonio.

The hyper- accelerated Dragon. I played 3.c4 in Rd. 4, transposing to a Maroczy Bind.

3.d4 cxd4 4.Qxd4 Nf6 5.Bb5 a6 6.e5 axb5 7.exf6 Nc6 8.Qd3 e6!?

13...Re2+

Here too Black denies castling, but now it has only token value.

White's last is to prevent ...Rh3. When I was in the ninth grade and just starting to get Chess Life, I was strongly impressed by an article on the 1969 Raach zonal featuring Uhlmann's French Defense games. I even started to play the French!

To this point the players have followed one of those games, Dieball-Uhlmann, which continued 16...0-0-0! 17.h5 Rg4 18.h6 Rh8 19.h7 Rg7 20.Rb4 Nc4 (=+) and White embarked on the flashy but incorrect sacrifice 21.Qxf5!?, losing in nine more moves. (The game is available at ChessGames.com.)

16...Nc4 17.h5 0-0-0 18.Rb4 b5?! 1-0

This makes life difficult for the bishop. More flexible is 18...Bc6 19.h6 Rg6 20.h7 Rh8 21.Ne2 Rg7 22.c3 Bb5 with counterplay in Tebb-Quillan, Liverpool 2006.

19.h6 Rg6 20.h7 Rh8 21.Ne2 Qc5 22.c3 Rg7 23.Nd4 Nxd4 24.cxd4 Qe7 25.Rh6 Rg6 26.Rxg6 fxe6 27.Qxg6 Rxe7 28.Rb3 Rg7 29.Qh6 Rh7 30.Qg6 Rg7 31.Qh6 Rh7 32.Qg5 Qf7

Black cannot save the game by doubling pawns: 32...Qxg5 33.fxe5 Be8 34.Rh3 Bg6 35.Be2 (a) 35... Re7 36.Rh8+ Kd7 37.Rg8 Be4 38.Bh5+; (b) 35...Kd7 36.Rxe7+ Bxe7 37.Bh5 Bg8 38.g6+ and the bishop at g8 is permanently snookered.

33.Rg3 Kb7 34.Qf6 a5 35.Bd2 Qe8 36.Bxc4 bxc4 37.Bxa5 Rf7 38.Qh6 Ka6 39.Bb4 Rf5 40. Rf3 Qf7??

Poor 40...Rh5 41.Qf6 +, but at least the rook doesn't get trapped.

Sometimes White prefaces this with Nh2, as Ng4-f6 is one of the ideas to the h-pawn push.

An entirely different idea is Qf4-f6, relying on g4-g5 to aid the f6 pawn after Black trades queens.

16...gxh5!?

Often 16...g5 is seen. Then after 17.Nh2, not 17...0-0-0 18.Qf3! with Ng4-f6 on the way, but 17...f5 with a very good game for Black.

White covers the f2 pawn but overlooks that c3 is a mate square, so his Re3 is pinned by the queen.

On the forced 27.Kd1, Black can still maneuver meaningfully while White is in passive hunker mode – chess hell for someone like Morshedi! 27...Kb8 28.Bg2 Ne7 29.Bh3 Ng6 30.Bg2 h4! and if 31.gxh4 Nf4. 27...Rxf3! 28.Bxe6 Bxe6 0-1

21.Qd3

I started to play 21.Ba5! but chickened out. It looks foolhardy to part with the good bishop and leave Black's unchallenged, but here goes Fritz: 21...Rfe8 22.Qd3 Nf7 23.Kh2 Re7 24.Bxb6 (at last White cashes in) ...axb6 25.Rxb6 Be8 26. a3 ±. 21...Kf7 22.Bf3

This was the last chance to eliminate Black's troublesome dark square bishop: 22.Bc3! Bxc3 23.Qxc3 Ng8 24.Re1 Nf6 25.Re3 =.

22...Rfe8 23.Ba5 Re7 24.Re1?

I've cornered my king into a mate net, whereas after 43.Kg2! h4 44.Qb8+ Kh7 45.Qc7+ Kh6 46.Qd8! my own mate threat at h8 breaks his stride: 46...Be3+ (46...Bg3+?? 47.Kg1+-) 47.Kf1 Rf2+ 48.Ke1 Re2+ =. Black has a perp, nothing more. 43...h4! 44.Qc8+

TEXAS MASTERS & CLASS CHAMPIONSHIPS

DALLAS, JAN. 12-14

by NM Selby Anderson

The J.G.'s Old-Fashioned Hamburgers Texas Masters and Texas Class chess tournament was again held at the UT Dallas student union. There was a slight dropoff in attendance with 90 players, down from 115 last March. This year with the state scholastic back in Spring Break, this event got the earlier time slot in mid-January. As luck would have it, this weekend saw travel advisories due to freezing rain throughout much of Texas.

The Masters field was as strong as ever, with three GMs and four IMs, as well as FM-elect Darwin Yang, the #2 nine-year-old in the USCF annual rating list.

IM Marko Zivanic and GM Magesh Panchanathan tied for first with 4-1, each with two draws.

Benjamin Wheeler and Luis Salinas directed for Southwest Chess Enterprises.

500-point upset at DCC

Darwin Yang recently scored a coup at the Dallas Chess Club, defeating IM Marko Zivanic with solid, classical chess. A seemingly blah opening shows its fangs when White gets pushy on the queenside and gets a clear advantage inside of 20 moves.

San Antonio New Year Open

Fifty-three players turned out for the New Year Open, held Dec. 30-31 in San Antonio. Brad Sawyer of Houston won first prize with a 4-0 score. Selby Anderson, who drew Dale Dike in Rd. 2, took clear second place with 3.5. Sawyer tore through Gordon, Noland and Malazarte with superior positional sense and alert tactics.

Total prizes were increased to $1,000 due to the excellent turnout. Martin Gordon directed at the TNI.

Open: 1st: Bradley Sawyer, $242; 2nd: Selby Anderson, $121; U2100: Dale Dike and Randall Schwarz, $45.60; U1900: Anthony Guerra, Derek Chang, George Qi and Eric Lu, $22.75 each.

Reserve (U1700): 1st: Steven Chen, $151; 2nd: Raymony Grillo, Charles Davis and Raul Flores, $33.33 each; U1500: Eric Chen $91; U1300: Kevin Xie, $61; Unr.: Jan Van Hummel, $61.

1.e4 c5 2.Nf3

If you want to steer clear of the usual Sicilian complications, you might like 2.c4 with a Botvinnik System (Nc3, g3, Bg2, Nge2, d3) — which happens to match what Black does in this game!

2...g6 3.c4 Nc6 4.d3 Bg7 5.Nc3 d6 6.Be2

Marty said he was playing in a coffeehouse style inspired by Malazarte. This formation works best if the f-pawn isn't blocked from going to f4.

6...e5 7.Nd5 Nge7 8.Bg5 h6 9. Nxe7 Nxe7 10.Bd2 0-0 11.Bc3 f5

This game is all about pawn play: Black has it, White does not.

12.Qc2 Be6 13.0-0 Rb8

Black's position is so good, he can play 13...b5 14.cxb5 a6 ♣.

14.Nd2 b5 15.cxb5 Rxb5?!

Needlessly speculative. 15...fxe4 15...fxe4 Rxf2 -/+, or 16.Rhf1 exd3 17.Bxd3 Nf5 ♣.

16.d4 cxd4 17.Bxb5 dxc3 18.bxc3 Qc7

18...fxe4 19.Nxe4 d5 20.Nc5 Bf5 21.Qb3 Qb6 22.Nd7 Bxd7 23. Bxd7 Qd6 ♣.

19.Ba4

19.f3! Qc5 20.Ba4 fxe4 21.fxe4 Rf2 22.Bb3 and Black's comp for the Exchange is slim.

19...fxe4 20.Rhf1?

At any rate Black's center is strong, but 20.Nxe4 d5 21.Ng3 must be tried, with Ne2 later to defend the c-pawn.

20...d5 21.Bb3 Qb6 22.Nb1 Rc8 23.Kb2 Nc6 24.Ka1 Nd4 25.Qb2 Nxb3+ 26.Qxb3 Qa6 27.Qb2 d4 28. Rfe1 e3!

Black's bishops and pawns make a pleasing impression, like a terrible yet beautiful force of nature.

29.fxe3 dxc3 30.Qc2 e4 31.Rd4

Against neutral moves Black proceeds with Rb8-b2.

31...Bxd4

31...Qd3!! is a cute queen offer, when White should just transpose to the game with 32.Na3.

32.exd4 Qd3 33.Na3 Qxc2

This stretches the game out compared to 33...Rb8!, one point being that the e-pawn is taboo (34.Rxe4? Qf1+ 35.Nb1 Rb2 —).

If you can clearly see your way to a winning position, the clarity is an asset — more than a possibly shorter win with lingering doubts.

34.Nxc2 Bc4 35.Ne3 Bd3 36.Rc1 Kf7 37.a3 a5 38.Ka2 a4 39.Ka1 Ke6 40.Ka2 c2 41.Kb2 Rb8+ 42. Kc3 Rb3+ 43. Kd2 Rxa3 44.Re1 Rb3 45.Rc1 Rb1 and ... 0-1

There is probably a rule of thumb in the Dragon that says this exchange is always bad. When Anand played it against Kasparov the chess world gasped, and no one was surprised at the outcome.

10...Bxc6?!

Failing to punish White's last move with 10...bxc6, which opens the b-file and takes 0-0-0 out of the question, while gaining control of d5. Fritz says 11.0-0 Be6 12.Bd3 is equal, but I'd put my money on Black's central preponderance.

OCF North American FIDE Open 2007.....My favorite moments

by WIM Alexey Root

As other tournament reports of this event will note, the prize fund was extraordinary: $11,000 guaranteed. In addition, FIDE (internationally) rated women received appearance fees, paid no tournament entry fees, and got free hotel rooms. FIDE-rated male players didn't have to pay entry fees. Despite these generous conditions, I thought I would have a rotten time in Stillwater, OK, Feb. 17-19. I hadn't played any chess games (casual or tournament) in over 6 months. Nor had I studied chess. So I thought I'd probably make many bad chess moves. My USCF rating is 2003, but I think my current playing strength is down to 1900. My only chess wish for the weekend was to play one interesting chess position.

Before the tournament, I was also resigned to social isolation. Between rounds at tournaments, players hang out, play chess for fun, and go to restaurants together. But I don't know many of the current players, and thus didn't expect to socialize. So I brought along a portable DVD player, five movies, and planned to eat meals in my room. In retrospect, this sounds rather sad. When I planned it in the days before the tournament, though, I thought it seemed like a reasonably pleasant break from my Denton routine of caring for my children, writing, and teaching my online courses for the University of Texas at Dallas (UTD).

The Saturday morning drive to Stillwater took 3.5 hours. The tournament director, Frank Berry, was welcoming, handing me my $500 appearance fee and introducing me to a couple of the other players. I settled in to my hotel room, put on a DVD, and ate snacks before round 1 at noon. My first round was an easy win against Melvin "Skip" Fritze (1424). He lost a rook on move 12, and the game was completed by 1:15. I swam in the hotel pool, ate more, and watched my DVD.

In Round 2 I played Renard Anderson (2213), whom I recognized from tournaments in CA almost 20 years ago. After he won, Renard invited me to the legendary Stillwater restaurant Eskimo Joe's. I had a great time. I hoped that some of my later-round opponents would be equally social.

In Round 3, I played Karthik Ramachandran (1945), a tenth grader. After we drew, I joined him, Magesh Panchanathan and Ali Morschedi at The Hideaway (a famous local Italian restaurant) for lunch. Magesh and Ali are students that I recruited as undergraduates to UTD. Both are UTD graduate students now, and I was delighted to hear about their academic and chess accomplishments. Karthik complimented me on bughouse (chess variant) articles that he read in Chess Life in 2003. The articles, which I wrote with Eric Wiggins, are available online at www.bughouse.info/academy/essays.html.

Back at the tournament hotel, I got another compliment from Charlie Hughes, president of the Little Rock, Arkansas chess club. Charlie said that those bughouse articles were like "cold fusion" to the bughouse players at his club, completely changing the way that they played their bughouse openings. I was amazed that my four-year-old articles had such a continuing impact.

In Round 4, I was paired with another 10th grader, Jacob Berger (1598). I overlooked his winning my bishop for two pawns. Though I was in trouble most of the game, and only ended up drawing, I love the position that occurred one move before the end of the game:

Berger – A. Root

White to move

Here is one possible line: 1.Kc6 Kb4 2.Kxc7 Kxc4 3.Kb6 Kd5! 4.Kxa6 Kc6 and now, despite being a passed pawn ahead, White cannot win. 5. Ka7 Kc7 (Black's king prevents White's King from leaving the a-file. Therefore, the white pawn will never promote on a8). 6.Ka8 Kc8 (etc.).

It was exciting to reach a position that could lead to this particular rook-pawn draw, because I could envision the sequence of moves. Thus, it was similar to winning with a smothered mate (see page 58 in my book Children and Chess: A Guide for Educators), which also relied on combining my prior knowledge of chess with the particular game's position. The actual end of the Berger-Root game was 1.Kd4 Kb4 (I offered a draw, which was accepted).

Thanks to the Berry brothers (Frank, and USCF Executive Board candidate Jim), all players got to be social before the Sunday night round. The Berrys provided shrimp appetizers and Domino's pizza for free to every participant. We all ate together in the tournament room before the 7 p.m. round.

My round 5 opponent, Jason Wawrzaszek (1736), resigned on move 13. He could have played on longer, since he was just one pawn behind. I was happy to have the evening off, however. I was able to catch the end of Desperate Housewives and swim in the hotel pool before it closed at 10 p.m. I even got to socialize late (11 p.m.-midnight), joining Michael Brooks, Richard (Michael's friend from KC, MO), and Jake (local Stillwater chess player) at a coffeehouse near Oklahoma State University. Michael beat Richard and Jake at checkers, leading all of us to speculate whether his International Master title at chess carried over to checkers too.

In round 6 I played Doyle Lobaugh (1596) and won.

My single biggest moment of tournament excitement came just after round 6. Some background: Grandmaster (GM) Alex Shabalov is rated 2659 and is ranked #10 in the U.S. He was also the top-ranked player at the North American Open. As is common with many players, Alex walks around the tournament hall when it is his opponent's turn to move. Alex had paused and looked at my chess board during two of the previous six rounds.

When Alex saw me after I finished my sixth round, he asked, "May I look at your book?"

I replied, "My scorebook?" I could hardly believe my ears: A top GM wanted to see some of my notated chess games! Wow! For that split second, I think my heart beat an extra three times.

Then Alex replied, "No, the book that you wrote." I retrieved Children and Chess from my backpack, and Alex bought it.

Round 7 was my chance to play a game that a GM would notice, as I had 4 points going into the round. A win would put me in a tie for 4th-6th place women's chess prizes, and be worth $600. A draw would likely have been worth $250, as more women had 4.5 of 7 and would therefore share in the prizes.

Unfortunately, I lost to Bayaraa Zorigt (2196), a Women's FIDE Master from Mongolia but attending college in Kentucky.

I didn't play too badly though, missing 25.Ng3, which would have led to a decent position for me. Instead, I played the mistake 25.Rxd8. The game score is on the MonRoi Web site <http://www.monroi.com>. My final score of 4 points (3 wins, 2 draws, and 2 losses) out of 7 rounds did not win prize money.

Despite losing the "money" round, I had a great time at the North American Open. The ending position against Berger was memorable, which fulfilled my pre-tournament chess desire. I made new pals and renewed acquaintances, seeing some of Stillwater in the process. In fact, I only had enough time alone in my hotel to watch 2 of my 5 DVDs. The tournament conditions were excellent: rounds ran on time, there were no disputes, and players kept quiet while games were in progress. I hope to return to other events run by the Oklahoma Chess Foundation's Frank and Jim Berry in the near future. ♠

An Interesting Experience

By Ellen Xiang

What is your favorite experience? Mine is the World Youth tournament. It was a fun, exciting and a learning experience. Here's the story:

"Yes!" I was excited when I saw my name among the kids who were qualified for the World Youth chess tournament in Georgia. "Atlanta, Georgia?" you may ask. The answer is no. Actually the Georgia I am talking about is near Turkey and Russia. Then a thought popped into my head: What if Georgia did not have many bathrooms and air conditioner like in France last year's World Youth? I had heard the story from a kid who played there. I wish that would not have happened this year. Well, as it turned out my wish came true!

We had just arrived at the hotel I could tell right away that we would have air conditioner and many bathrooms. When we opened the door of our hotel room, I was amazed. What a view! I couldn't wait to sleep on the beds. They were fluffy and comfortable. I didn't wish for anything else. I thought it was already too great. Little did I know there was more to come!

When the tournament just started, I was a kind of nervous. "Were my opponents strong?" was one of the millions of questions I had. After I won my first game, I began to calm down. "That wasn't so hard" I told myself. When the tournament was finished, I had 6.0 out of 11 games. In fact all the girls that represented the US in U10 had 6.0.

The World Youth tournament was a learning experience for me. I came home a stronger chess player. I hope to come back next year and do better. I can't expect too much but work hard. I can't wait until next year!

The World Youth Tournament

By Evan Xiang

The World Youth Tournament was a great experience for me. It was exciting and fun, because I learnt a lot from the coaches and the players during the tournament.

It was fun to play with the people around the world, plus I got a souvenir from one of my opponents My best game from the tournament is my last. I used the opening my coach taught me just before the game. It was funny that whenever my coach shows me an opening, the next game my opponent will play that opening.

It is an honor to represent the United States of America in the World Youth. I want to go again to have more experience.

9...Bd7 10.Bxd7+ Qxd7 11.Bxf6 gxf6 12.Nd5

Excellent understanding. White has a decisive strategic advantage because of his strong knight versus Black's weak bishop (most of his pawns are on the same color as the bishop); also, White has the healthier pawn structure because of Black's doubled f-pawn.

Polgar Nationals held in Corpus Christi

The Susan Polgar National Open Championship for Girls and National Chess Challenge for Boys were held Feb. 16-17 at the Susan Polgar Chess Center in Corpus Christi. A total of 262 players competed.

In the Girls' K-2nd, Hannah Liu was clear first with 5.5 out of 6. Brianna Guillen and Astrid Jeppesen placed 2nd-3rd with 5.0 each. Egly Elementary had the winning team.

In Girls' 3rd-5th, four tied with 5-1: Victoria Zhang, Sarah Sampei, Georgia Olvera, and Alice Dong. The top team was Central Catholic.

In Girls' 6th-9th, Charlina Hung was first with 6-0. Sayaka Foley was second with 5. Faulk Middle School topped STCC on team tiebreaks.

In the Girls' Open, Stephanie Guajardo and Ananya Roy tied with 5-1 each. Tiffany Leong and Victoria Bailey tied for 2nd-4th with 4.5.

The Boys' K-2nd ended in a tie with Edgar Santoyo, Tommy Polgar-Schutzman and Kevin Durkin at 5-1. Paredes had the winning team.

Derek Chang won Boys' 3rd-5th with 6-0. Sebastian Alaniz, Chase Ehig and Joshua Flores placed 2nd-4th with 5.0. Canales was top team.

In 6th-9th, Matthew Michaelides won first with 6, ahead of Luke Zhu with 5. T.H. Rogers was top team.

In the Boys' Open (open to adults) there was a three-way tie, with Jesse Lozano, Vicente Flores and Lou Thurston each scoring 5-1. Paredes Elementary was top team.

In the Girls' Blitz, Melinda Shokler of Dallas took first with 6-0. Paul Truong and Matthew Michaelides won the Boys' Blitz with 5.5.

The Myth of Chess and Intelligence

Chess Dad 101 by Robert Rausch

"Put on your jacket!" Mom demanded, "or you'll catch a cold." Like most 1970s mothers, Mom held fast to the conventional wisdom that colds were caused by the weather. Truth be known, she probably still doesn't entirely accept the scientific view that a virus is the more likely culprit. Mom isn't unlike a number of Americans exposed to myths, "old wives tales", and urban legends. A long-held belief in popular, unproven conjecture is often more powerful than acquiescence to dry, grueling statistical analysis or an in-depth study using the scientific method.

I was reminded of that a couple of weeks ago when several invitations advertising a "Chess in Education Workshop" came across my email. The literature focused on teaching chess in order to improve cognitive ability – particularly for gifted and talented kids. Like many of you, I have always assumed that playing chess simply "makes you smarter". Duh – analytical challenges, foresight, stepwise problem-solving: yeah, of course it makes you smarter. Several years ago, I was forced to validate this perception, after approaching our school district officials about adding chess to the curriculum. "Sure!" I bragged. "There are gobs of literature out there that shows playing chess will improve test scores."

Well, I was partially right: there were certainly gobs of literature relating to chess and intelligence. Surprisingly, though, the pickings were pretty slim when it came to hard science demonstrating what impact chess may or may not have on intelligence. Oh sure, there are all manner of opinions and personal testimonials and rah-rah studies as to the academic benefits of chess. However, not much objective, scientific work exists to suggest that chess actually increases ones intelligence – much less improves test scores. An oft-cited study conducted by the TCA's own Jim Liptrap in 1994 illustrates the problem. Liptrap gathered three years worth of statistical data comparing TAAS reading and math scores for chess players and non-chess players in the Klein Independent School District (Spring, Texas). The results clearly demonstrate that the chess playing group out-performed the non-chess players in both reading and math. Game over. Checkmate, right?

Not so fast.

Liptrap's study does not resolve a fundamental question in education research – one known as the "self-selection problem". That is, did playing chess make the kids smart, or do smart kids simply choose to play chess? The answer is critical to promoting chess in the school curriculum – giving smart kids something to do is fine; but teaching them a game that increases their intelligence? Well, THAT'S the Holy Grail. And like the Grail, the quest for scientific evidence linking chess and intelligence is proving to be just as elusive. Research knights are often plagued by a small volume of data, dubious assumptions, a limited knowledge of statistical concepts and a blinder-guided love of chess. Even Liptrap, who apparently knows a thing or two about statistics, concludes that more chess programs are needed – ignoring the possibility that chess is likely only one of many factors driving the higher test scores. Liptrap's study begs a number of other interesting questions. For example, if indeed playing chess does improve a child's TAAS scores, is there a correlation between how much chess a child plays and their TAAS score? Do strong players have higher scores than average players or novices? What impact, if any, does the amount of time spent practicing chess have on test scores?

Most researchers stop short of explicitly declaring that playing chess increases intelligence (as measured by a variety of standardized tests). The implication however, hangs over many published studies like a free piece in the opening: chess players have higher test scores, therefore... The United States Chess Federation references many articles on its website under the heading of "Chess Research". One such paper by Dr. Stuart Margulies titled "The Effect of Chess on Reading Scores: District Nine Chess Program Second Year Report" definitively concludes that reading score improvement for players receiving computer-enhanced chess instruction outperformed that of the average student in both the district and the nation. Like Liptrap, Margulies clearly understands the statistical concepts needed to analyze the data. However, the skeptical observer will immediately note that the computer-enhanced chess group achieving this level of success consisted of only twenty-two students – compared to over 1,100 non-players in the study. The small number of players leads one to question the validity of the Margulies conclusions and wonder why a follow-up analysis with a larger number of players was not conducted (or published) in the ensuing fifteen years.

While researchers like Liptrap and Margulies attempt to apply a scientific approach (although their conclusions are debatable), others are simply over-the-top. Another USCF-referenced piece unabashedly titled "Chess Improves Academic Performance" cites a number of "studies" supporting their premise. One concludes that "55% of students showed significant improvement in academic performance" after only twenty days of chess instruction (It's a miracle!) and "suspension and outside altercations have decreased by at least 60%" (Hmmm, that's a new one...). The piece includes quotes by a number of Principals similar to: "This is wonderful! This is marvelous! This is stupendous! It's the finest thing that ever happened to this school." Rah-rah!

Don't get me wrong. As a lifelong player, coach and promoter of the game, I would love to find definitive proof of a cause-and-effect relationship between chess and increased intelligence. Such evidence would be a boon for our game and result in a multitude of new players. I'm concerned though, that in our haste to market chess we sometimes let our passion and emotion get the better of us. As promoters of the game in our communities, I believe that we are best served by selling chess for what it is: a fascinating, intellectually stimulating, and pleasant diversion. When we start speculating as to the relationship between chess and intelligence, however, we may want to put on our jackets. After all, we don't want to catch a cold. ♘
