A Message from the President

The last two months have brought some exciting news to Texas. Warren Harper, the Texas High School Champion, is now the Arnold Denker Tournament champion, after winning the tournament with a rare clear first place.

Warren, whose rating in 2004 was 1479, is 2294 and will probably be over 2300 when you read this. Joe Bradford, who has already had two draws with Warren, opines that Warren has the talent to be a senior master by the time he graduates from high school. Those of you grown ups who got to beat Warren when he was coming up the ladder better frame those scoresheets, because they are going to become rarer and rarer.

Meanwhile, I've asked the Board of Directors to take on an ambitious project for the future: to have the 2010 World Youth Championship held in Texas. This event has recently been held in Crete, France, and the Democratic Republic of Georgia; this year, it will be held in Turkey. To my knowledge, it has never been held in the United States. We've received the support of Susan Polgar, newly elected to the USCF Board of Directors, and later this year, I'll be traveling to Antalya, Turkey, to learn more about the logistics of the event itself and to make personal connections with FIDE officials who have input into the final awarding of the bid. I'll be making a fuller report on this project at the business meeting at the Southwest Open.

By now, you may have visited the new TCA web page. We've also moved the Texas Chess forums to a Texas Chess group, in Google groups. I'm a bit miffed that the groups haven't seen more use. This is a good location to find files relevant to TCA governance, and I hope it will eventually grow into the primary site for discussion of all issues concerning Texas Chess. All you need to join the groups is a Google user ID. Check out the group at <http://groups.google.com/group/texaschess>. I'll buy a free regular membership for the member who starts the best thread in September-October!

And that's it for now. Hope to see you at the business meeting or at a chess tournament near you soon.

Warren Harper wins Denker Tournament of High School Champions

Warren Harper of Houston won the 23rd Annual Arnold Denker Tournament of High School Champions, held July 29-Aug. 3 in Cherry Hill, New Jersey. He won a full four-year scholarship to Texas Tech University in Lubbock; however, with a year of high school left he is still deciding on college.

National Tournament Director Francisco L. Guadalupe posted this comment to the US Chess Online report:

Warren played his first rated game three years ago, in June 2004, at the late age of 13. Exactly a year later, he became a rated Expert. Now he is a 2300, US Cadet Co-Champion and Denker Champion! We met Warren and his family two years ago when we moved to Houston. Not only is he an incredible chess player, he is a great student and a very nice and polite young man who comes from a very nice family. My son and Warren quickly became friends, although at tournaments they have been competitors who have played each other over 20 times! (By my last count, Warren held a 12-10 advantage) Their last encounter at the Texas Scholastics Championship, won by Warren, decided our representative to the Denker. While we were disappointed that Francisco finished half a point behind, we were very happy for Warren and told him that he was going to bring the title back to Houston and...he did!

I suspect that Warren will be a 2400 within a year. I also think the IM title will follow within a year after that, if not sooner. I know Tom, Carol and the rest of the family are very proud of him, and so are we!

Missing the simple 11... Nxd4 12.Nxd4 Bxe5 —+
12.Nxc6! Bxc6 13.Ng5 g6 14.h4 f6!?

Of course Fritz condemns this move, but moves like Kg7 and Rh8 did not appeal to me; this way at least Black obtains an initiative which is not immediately obvious to stop.

15.Nxe6 Qe7 16.Nxf8 fxe5?! 17. Bb2?

17.b5!, followed by Be2, would have made life very difficult for Black.

17...Rxf8 18.Qd2 Ng4!

Now White cannot run to either side of the board; White is in a practical sense lost.

19.Be2 exf4 20.b5 f3 21.bxc6 Bg3+ 22.Kd1 Nf2+ 23.Kc1 Bf4 24. Qxf4 Rxf4 25.cxb7 Qxb7 26.Bxf3 Nxb1 0-1

1.d4 Nf6 2.c4 g6 3.Nf3 Bg7 4.g3 0-0 5.Bg2 d6 6.0-0 Nfd7?!

A highly unusual move; but after the game, my opponent said that he was equally surprised: he had never seen White fianchetto against the King's Indian Defense ever!

7.Nc3 Nc6 8.e4 e5 9.d5 Ne7 10.b4 h6 11.Ne1 f5 12.f3 f4 13.Nd3 g5 14.Bh3 Nf6 15. Bxc8 Qxc8 16.g4 h5 17.h3 hxg4 18. hxg4 Kf7 19.a4 c6?

Not necessarily a bad move, but after all of his preparation to attack me on the kingside, quite perplexing. 20.dxc6 Nxc6 21.Nb5 Qe6 22.c5 d5 23.Nd6+ Kg6?

And after all of his play in the center, Black still wants to attack me on the kingside! After the simple Kg8, although the position is quite complex, Black would more than likely have slightly better chances. Now white shows the weakness of Black's king:

24.exd5 Nxd5 25.Nf2 Nd4?

Black should have considered e4 or Ne3; now his position proves quite difficult.

26.Rb1!

The exclaim is not for the strength of the move (26.Re1 was possibly even stronger) but for the psychological effect. My opponent sat for nearly 45 minutes (he had only used about 30 minutes for the whole game at this point!). After the game he said he couldn't believe such a quiet move was so strong!

26...Ne3 27.Qd3+ e4 28.Nfxe4 Nxf3+ 29.Rxf3 Qxg4+ 30.Rg3 fxg3 31.Bxe3 Kh5 32.Qd5 g2 33.Qxg5+ Qxg5 34.Bxg5 Rg8 35.Kxg2 Raf8

36.Rh1+ Kg6 37.Be3 Be5 38.Rh6+ Kg7 39.Re6 Bxd6 40.Rxd6

White went on to win in time pressure. 1-0

Apparently a novelty to my opponent; he had only seen a4 before. After the game we had a curious discovery: we both had just about opposite records with this opening! He had lost only one game in the past two years, beating two IMs on the way, while I have never lost from this position, scoring about five or six wins against experts. He said he was very confident he would beat me from here, but I have never thought of White's attack as exactly bone-chilling, and in fact it turns out to be an illusion the entire game.

16.Ng5 Nf8 17.h5 c4 18.Ne3 cxd3 19.cxd3 Nd4 20.Qd1 b3 21.axb3 Qxb3 22.Qg4 Bxd3 23.Rad1 Rc5 24.Kh2 Nc2 25.Nxc2 Bxc2 26.Rd2 h6 27.Ne4 Bxe4 28.Bxe4 Kh8+

6...Bg6 is the normal move. 7.Qb3 Qb6 8.h3 Bh5 9.g4 Bg6 10. Nxc6 hxc6 11.Bg2 Nbd7 12.0-0 dxc4?

A fatal mistake, quite similar to what Kramnik did against Topalov in their match. Now White has little to worry about.

13.Qxc4 Bd6 14.f4 c5?!

Black is enticed to try breaking up White's center as soon as possible, but Rd8 or 0-0-0 would have been more prudent.

Texas pride: Harper with Courtney Jamison (=3rd in Polgar)

15.d5 e5 16.f5 gxf5 17. Rxf5 g6 18.Rf2 a6 19.a4 Qa5?

Black feels like he has to justify his a6 move, but this simply wastes a vital tempi. It may not be immediately obvious, but every single one of Black's pawns after b5 prove to be a weakness! I have not had many games where I am up 6 pawns, but here he proved to be quite helpless.

20.Bd2! b5?

Black could have avoided losing immediately with 20...Qd8 21.Raf1 Rf8.

21.Qf1! b4 22.Rxf6 bxc3 23.Bxc3 Qc7 24.Rxf7 c4 25.Rg7 Rf8 26.Qe2 e4

Desperation.

31...Nxe4 32.Rxc7 Rxc7 33.Rxd6!

Eliminating any possible counterplay.

I was shocked that after the game my opponent stated that after 32...Bxc7 instead of ...Rxc7 he would have had counterplay! My opponent was visibly upset, so I told him he should probably look earlier for improvements. I listened while he described imaginary variations where he plays ...Bh2+ and ...Rc2+ and somehow obtains perpetual check. I noted that being up 5, possibly 6 pawns, I could even play d6 or sacrifice somehow. He finally seemed to stubbornly agree with me. I could tell from talking with him that he was quite prejudiced in the line with Black; I could also tell from the way he slammed his pieces half the game. Any case, I still had to calculate a lot to make sure he wouldn't be able to swindle me. At this point I felt very good about my chances in the tournament: I led the field by a half-point with two rounds to go. 1-0

A novelty introduced to me by a book, but after the game I might prefer the simpler Qa5, with approximate equality.

10.c4 Qh4+ 11.Nf2 Nc7 12.e3 Nc6 13.Be2 Na6 14.0-0 Nxc5 15.Bb2 Rd8 16.Qc2 e5 17.Nd3 Qh6!

My opponent had only seen Nxd3 Bxd3, when White has a slight edge. Now it is the other way around.

18.f4 Nxd3 19.Bxd3 e4 20.Be2 Be6 21.Rad1

After the game, we were both fascinated: Both of us thought the other had the better game! After the game and looking at it more though, we both favored White. However, when I came home and gave it to Fritz, it actually gives black a slight edge.

21...Qh4 22.g4 fxg4 23.Qxe4 Re8 24.Qg2 Bf5 25.Bd3 Bxd3 26.Qd5+ Kh8 27.Qf7 Rg8 28.Rxd3 Rad8 29.Rd7 Rxd7 30.Qxd7

Throughout the game, I was constantly (but incorrectly) thinking that he was better, so here I went for a complicated move that provokes him to go for the draw (my opponent had about ten minutes compared to my hour). Instead, 30...g3! would have set White more problems, e.g. 31.h3 Qh5! 32.Qg4 Qxg4 33.hxg4 Rd8 34.f5 Na5.

30...Na5

Still, the strength of this move fascinated us both! During the game we both thought White was better at this point, but here both of us suddenly changed our opinions. Despite White's menacing bishop pointed at my kingside, Black just moves his knight to the edge of the board to force a draw! Quite unusual indeed! Even though I drew, this was probably one of my favorite games of the tournament.

31.Bxg7+ Rxg7 32.Qe8+ Rg8 33. Qe5+ Rg7

Luckily for me, Jeffrey Haskel drew Maxx Coleman, so I retained my half-point lead going into the last round. I could have drawn and at least obtain the title of co-champ, but I wasn't even sure if I would win on tiebreaks. I found it ironic that the same person I defeated for the Cadet title was the same person I would play for the Denker!

1.d4 Nf6 2.Nf3

After the game he told me he had prepared a bunch of lines in 2.c4 e5, so at least he was thrown off a bit.

2...c5 3.d5 b5 4.Bg5

Why not play a line that Susan Polgar introduced in Chess Life for the Denker championship! (The Polgar was literally taking place side by side).

4...Qa5+?!

I am not even sure if Polgar mentioned this move, but it does not appear to be very good.

5.c3 Bb7 6.Bxf6 gxf6 7.e4 d6 8.a4 Ba6?! 9.Nbd2 b4 10.Nb3 Qb6 11.a5 Qb7 12.Bxa6

Strangely enough, Nbd2 was even stronger, heading for c4.

12...Nxa6 13.0-0 e6 14.Nc1 0-0-0 15.Ne2 Bh6 16.Ng3 Rhg8 17.Nh5 Bg7 18.Qd3 Nc7 19.a6!

The brave pawn marches forward to certain death, but it proves to be a worthy sacrifice.

19...Qb6 20.Ra4?!

The simple Nd2! was nearly devastating, e.g. 20...Kb8 21.Nc4 Qb5 22.Ra5 Qd7 23.cxb4 +- 20...f5 21.exf5 Nxd5 22.fxe6 fxe6 23.Ng5

A picturesque position: white has no real space, none too active rooks, and no serious threats, but the invading cavalry proves to be worthy of bringing black's entire army to its knees!

23...Be5 24.Nxe6 Qc6 25.Qf3 Rde8 26.Nef4 Qxa4 27.Nxd5 Qxa6 28.Nhf6

Here my happy opponent sank into thought again, suddenly realizing the dangers of his position. It is against a chessplayer's intuition to rid himself of his strong bishop, but here it was the only defense: 28...Bxf6! 29.Nxf6 Qb7 30.Qh3+ Kb8 31.cxb4 cxb4 32. Nxe8 Rxe8, when white has only a minimal advantage.

28...Qb7

29.Nxg8 Rxg8 30.cxb4 cxb4

Moving? Please send you new address to Barb Swafford, roundsie1@dot11.net.net

31.Rc1+?!

As Mr. Guadalupe pointed out to me after the game, 31.Ne7+ won the Exchange. But after all the knight's hard work, it only seemed fair to let the it dominate on its perch.

31...Kb8 32.Rc7 Qa6 33.g3 Rc8 34.Rxc8+ Qxc8 35. b3 a5 36.Ne7 Qc1+ 37.Kg2 Qc5 38.Qd3 Qc7 39. Qb5+ Qb7+ 40.Nc6+ Kc7 41. Qxb7+ Kxb7 42.Nxa5+ Kc7 43.Nc4 Bc3 44.Kf3 d5 45.Ne3 Kc6 46.Ke2 Kc5 47.Kd3 Bf6 48.f4 Kd6 49.g4 Ke6 50.Nc2 Bc3 51.Nd4+ Kf6 52. h4 Kg6 53.h5+ Kf6 54.Ne2 Ke6 55.Nxc3

Fittingly, the last move of the game is made by white's knight. And amazingly, 22 of White's 55 moves were made by knights! 1-0

Seven tie at U.S. Open

... Shabalov cools Simutowe streak

There was a seven-way tie in the U.S. Open (Cherry Hill, NJ July 28-August 5). Boris Gulko, Alexander Shabalov, Sergey Kudrin, Benjamin Finegold, Michael Rohde, Michael Mulyar and Anton Del Mundo all scored 7.5/9, good for $2,263. Gulko won the title on tiebreak.

Texas chess fans were wowed as IM Amon Simutowe, recent UTD grad and 2005 Texas champ, briefly led the tournament (along with Finegold) with a perfect score after defeating GM Nakamura in Rd. 6:

Alisa's Poetic Justice

The big side story of the tournament was the "poetic justice" served up by 16-year-old Alisa Melekhina (2205) to FM Braden Bournival. (2387), 19, known for his Internet posts taking a dim view of women's chess ability. (His comment on the US women's championship: "They might as well just flip a coin to decide who is going to win each game, because when women play chess the results are completely random.")

Here it was his turn as Black:

69...g2?? (69...Kf3 →) 70.Kf2 1-0

Alisa followed this up with a win over Senior Master Thomas Bartell. She finished with 6-3.

It turns out that Bournival had a previous claim to fame, as a former spam king whose Amazing Internet Products hawked male enhancement pills. When America Online won a lawsuit under the CAN-SPAM act of 2003, he had to turn over assets including a Hummer and $85,000 in gold bars(!) AOL recently had a promotional giveaway of the booty.

Simutowe wins Houston Open

IM Amon Simutowe warmed up for the US Open by winning the Houston Open (July 20-22). The 2005 Texas champ and former UTD student from Zambia held off a credible challenge in the last round from Warren Harper, who had a chance to make it a three-way tie but only came up with a draw.

There were 156 players competing in the cash prize sections, and 77 in the four scholastic sections. Prizes paid were 63.75% of the advertised amount. Juniors counted as one-half and re-entries as one-third.

Francisco L. Guadalupe directed* for Cajun Chess.

Mexico to host world championship

World Champion Vladimir Kramnik will defend his title in Mexico City Sept. 12-Oct. 1, 2007. In a double round robin with $1.3 million at stake, he faces seven challengers:

- 1 Anand, Viswanathan IND 2792
- 5 Morozevich, Alexander RUS 2758
- 7 Leko, Peter HUN 2751
- 8 Aronian, Levon ARM 2750
- 12 Svidler, Peter RUS 2735
- 13 Gelfand, Boris ISR 2733
- 14 Grischuk, Alexander RUS 2726

(July FIDE top 100 list)

With an average rating over 2750, this will be a rare Category XXI event. Kramnik, who is ranked #3 in the world with a 2769 rating, won a unification match last fall from FIDE world champion Veselin Topalov. Kramnik was the classical world champion, having beaten Kasparov in 2000 and narrowly defended his title against Peter Leko in 2004.

The venue will be the Sheraton Centro Historico, a five-star resort hotel in the heart of Mexico City and 15 minutes from the airport. Travel packages are offered by Especta, the official travel agency for this world championship.

Summer Open

by Selby Anderson

Forty players turned out for the Summer Open, held Aug. 4-5 in San Antonio at the Texas Neurosciences Institute.

I won the Open section thanks to a lucky win in the last round against FM Dennis Rylander (2360), recent UTD grad from Sweden now living in Austin. Going into this game, he had a 2-0 record against me. After being roundly outplayed in a QGD Slav, I mixed things up with five moves left to time control. After mutual blunders he flagged as he clocked in his 30th. I finished in clear first with 3.5 out of 4, having drawn Ju Ahn (1812) in Round 2.

Four players tied with 3, including Rylander, Don Sutherland, Gregg Stanley and J.P. Hyltin. Stanley had a chance to tie for first if he had converted his extra pawn against Hyltin in the last round, but there was ample play for the pawn. Kevin Lu and Steven Chen shared the U2000 prize with 2.5.

Special mention goes to Juan Carrizales (1799), who played up just to make the numbers even and avoid byes. He drew (and should have beaten) Dale Dike (2011) and defeated Martin Gordon (1937) in the last round, finishing 2-2.

In the Reserve, three players scored 3.5 to tie for first, second and under-1600 prizes: Andrew Nathanael Lozano, Samuel McLemore and Zhaosu Ye. Joanna Slusarewicz was top U1400 with 2.5. Lloyd Lyssyj won the unrated prize with 2.

Prizes paid were 85% of the advertised amount. Martin Gordon directed. See www.gordonmd.com/Summer2007.html for crosstables.

1.c4 Nf6 2.g3 g6 3.Bg2 Bg7 4.Nc3 0-0 5.e4 d6 6.Nge2 Nc6 7.0-0 e5 8.d4?

White gets a good game with the Botvinnik setup 8.d3 Nh5 9.Be3.

The text arrives a move late if White wanted to transpose to the KID, because Black could now play 8...exd4 9.Nxd4 Nxe4! 10.Nxc6 Nxc3 with advantage: 11.bxc3 bxc6 12.Bxc6 Bh3 13.Re1 Bxc3±. This state of affairs exists until 10.d5.

8...a6?! 9.h3?! Rb8?! 10.d5 Ne7

Now several good moves beckon White, for instance 11.b4 answering to both ...b5 and ...c5. Also 11.Be3 and 11.f4!? are possible.

11.a4 Ne8 12.Be3 c5!

Putting a damper on queenside play.

13.Qd2 f5 14.Bh6

Now Black must watch out for his weak dark squares. A sharp alternative is 14.f4!?, to open lines.

14...Bxh6 15.Qxh6 Nf6

15...fxe4! 16.g4!? Nf6 17.Ng3 Kh8 18.Nce4 =.

16.Qd2?

Now White's defensive attitude gets the better of him. It was a perfect time for 16.f4! exf4 17.Nxf4 fxe4 18.g4! taking away f5 from Black's pieces, and the e-pawn is not running away. White's queen is a very unpleasant, obstinate guest.

16...fxe4 17.Kh2 Bf5 18.g4 Bxg4!

An experienced player knows a good "whoopie" attack when he sees it! The extra move required to let out Black's queen makes this especially pleasing: 19.hxg4 Nxg4+ 20.Kg1 (not 20.Kg3?? Nf5+! 21. Kxg4 Qh4 mate) 20...Nf5! 21.f3 exf3 22.Rxf3 Qh4 23.Rh3 Qf2+ 24. Kh1 Nh4 25.Rg1 Nf3 → Fritz.

19.Ng3 Bf3 → 20.Nxe4 Nxe4 21. Nxe4 Bxg2 22.Kxg2 Nf5 23.Ng5 Nd4 24.f4!??

Anything to mix it up.

24...Rxf4 25.Ne6 Nxe6 26.dxe6 Qg5+ 27.Kh2 Rbf8 28.Rxf4 exf4

Now it is Black who is overly defensive-minded about the e-pawn. 28... Rxf4 29.Rf1 Qh4! and White's options are few. 30.e7 Qxe7 31. Rxf4 exf4 32.Qd5+ Kg7 33.Qf3 Qe3! is an easy win for Black..

In many of these lines Black wins by forcing queens off.

Intending to answer 9.e4 with 9...a4! and White must trade center pawn for flank, at least.

10.a4?

Giving away a vital square. In the Dutch Accepted (4.Nc3 dxc4 5.a4) White routinely makes this concession, but he has an advantageous pawn center to balance it.

Better is 10.Bf4 b6 = or 10...a4 11.Nxa4 dxc4 12.Qxc4!? b5 13.Qxc6 Rxa4 14.Bc7 Rc4! =

10...Bb4! 11.Rd1?!

Polgar Invitational

by Courtney Jamison

First I would like to thank Texas Chess Association for their great support and funding $1,000 towards the trip to Cherry Hill, New Jersey. It's a great honor to win the qualifying tournament and be the Texas representative at the Susan Polgar Invitational Chess for Girls. I would also like to thank Luis Salinas for organizing and running the Susan Polgar Qualifying tournament. This tournament in New Jersey is a wonderful experience to meet new people and learn more about chess.

This year in Cherry Hill, NJ was another exciting strong tournament for me. The Polgar was very smoothly and professionally run, just as one would expect from new board members Paul Troung and Susan Polgar. The Crowne Plaza Hotel was a great playing site, except for the fact that most eating places were an uncomfortable walking distance away. I met up with some friends I hadn't seen since the last Polgar, and I enjoyed the relaxed atmosphere during the tournament. Since I decided not to play in the U.S. Open this year, I had more time to prepare for my games and play in the side events.

The rounds started every day at 11 a.m. and ran for six days. I think we had representatives from all 50 states. It was not to play in the same room with these players, all working extremely hard at the chessboard hoping they would win all their games and be the one to take home the top prize, a four-year scholarship to Texas Tech in Lubbock.

My game play throughout the six rounds was not my strongest, and I gave in too easily in the games I drew. My final result was equal third (sixth on tiebraks) with 4.5/6, a half-point behind winners Julia Kerr and Eunice Rodriguez. I received a House of Staunton chess set valued at $200, as did all the other girls in 2nd-25th places.

I won the puzzle solving contest (ten puzzles correctly in about 6.5 minutes) and received a Fritz 9 CD.

I won the bughouse tournament with my partner Sylvia Yang (our team was Don't Mess With Texas), and we received another CD and computer game.

I came in second in the blitz tournament, and received a Learn the Endgame CD by Susan Polgar.

The whole trip was fun and exciting, as many chess tournaments are, and I look forward to hopefully representing Texas again in Lubbock next year!

Chess becomes teaching tool

By Matthew Zabel / Staff Writer

The Denton Record-Chronicle, Aug. 18, 2007

If your children come home from school and announce that they played chess that day, don't worry. They might have learned something anyway.

It might have been part of that day's math lesson.

Jerry Nash, the scholastic director of the U.S. Chess Federation, told educators who gathered at Texas Woman's University on Friday how chess could teach many math skills to young children.

"Will chess solve all the problems? No, but it is a tool that enables teachers to do more efficiently what they are required to do," Nash told the group. "The math and the critical-thinking skills are inherent in the game."

Nash said he began to see the benefits of chess when he worked as a college minister in Lake Charles, La.

Students with problems would come talk to him, he said, and they would want him to tell them how to make things better.

The problem, he determined, often centered on the students' inability to think for themselves and make intelligent decisions.

However, he found students who could do those things when he taught chess at a school in St. Charles.

"My [college] students didn't know how to think about their future; they didn't know how to think about their past," he said. "The fourth- and fifth- graders I was coaching in chess could out-think my college students."

Such programs should appeal to business, he said, which needs good problem solvers.

Sixteen adults and four children attended the workshop.

While Nash discussed the benefits of chess in teaching geometry, planning, how to read a grid, critical thinking and other lessons, five children sat around a table in the back of the room.

Within one hour, 10-year-old William Root taught three others the game's basic rules.

His "students" had never played before but were all doing well, he said afterward.

"One of my students, she was brilliant," William said. "She could definitely play a chess game and play fairly well."

His mother, Alexey W. Root, a senior lecturer at the University of Texas at Dallas and the associate director of the university's chess program, wrote a book on the subject.

Her book, Children and Chess: A Guide for Educators, explains how chess can be used as a teaching tool in the classroom, and gives sample lessons.

Root said she had organized a chess program at Evers Park Elementary School and a tournament for Denton's middle schools.

Robert Jackson, a teacher at Seguin Elementary School in Grand Prairie, took an online class that Root taught, he said, and he uses chess in his classroom.

"Usually when I would teach them to read coordinates and grids, I'd go over it and over it and over it, and about half of them still wouldn't get it," he said. "The first time I taught them coordinates and grids with chess, all but one got it. I said 'Yes!'"

Paige Owens, 11, contemplates her next move at a workshop on using chess to teach math skills to children Friday at Texas Woman's University. William Root, who had just taught Paige how to play, watches.
