A word from the editor

What a year this has been for Texas chess players! In March, for the first time in Final Four of College Chess, three of the four teams were from Texas. Although UMBC won, the host team of UT-Brownsville had its best result with second place. Then in June their top board, GM Timur Gareev, won the National Open in Las Vegas outright – the first player in 21 years to do so without tying!

In July, Houston hosted a record-setting U.S. Junior Open. The winner of the main event was a UT-Austin student, Deepyaman Datta from Dallas.

Then in August a recent UTD graduate, GM Alejandro Ramirez, won the U.S. Open – outright!

That same weekend brought the news that Tommy He of Houston won gold in the under-10 division of the Pan-Am Youth Championships in Brazil. Congrats to all out Texas chess stars!

Looking ahead, the U.S. Class Chess Championships return to Houston, Oct. 1-3. This time the event will be at a very convenient location, the Hilton Houston Hobby Airport Hotel, with free parking; free shuttle service from Hobby airport; $89 room rate! This event awards national class titles, with winners to be listed in the Chess Life year-book. This year's event promises to be the strongest yet! So far, the field includes U.S. Open Champion GM Alejandro Ramirez, GM Timur Gareev, GM Axel Bachmann, GM Ioan Chirila, IM Marko Zivanic, IM Puchen Wang, IM Salvijus Bercys, IM Julio Sadorra, and IM Daniel Fernandez. In addition, it is very likely that we will get two more GMs in attendance (to be confirmed soon)! Of course, this event is for players of all skills and ages. It has a division for previously unrated players as well as a scholastic side event. For more information, please visit the tournament Web page, www.uschess.org/tournaments/2010/class/ .- SKA

GM Ramirez coasts to victory at the US Open

By Randy Hough

As the 111th Annual U.S. Open ended at the Hyatt Regency in Irvine, California, GM Alejandro Ramirez maintained his lead and took the championship with a score of 8-1, earning a cash bonus for his clear win. Although the top two boards ended in draws, both were fighting games that would have pleased the late Jerry Hanken, the indefatigable chess promoter after whom this Open was named.

Alejandro classifies his draw with Julio Sadorra, a Filipino IM who attends University of Texas at Dallas, as "topsy-turvy," and thought he was winning at one point.

GM Varuzhan Akobian remained a half-point behind (having earlier drawn GM Timur Gareev) by drawing with young FM Daniel Naroditsky. He feels he missed a win -- 33.Nf5 instead of 33.Rxg7 as he played -- but praises Daniel for his defensive resilience.

Ramirez, a graduate of the University of Texas at Dallas, has applied for permanent residency and may change his federation, but for now he continues to represent Costa Rica.

The 2011 U.S. Championship in Saint Louis goes to the highest scoring eligible player, but Akobian is a near lock to get in on rating, and Shabalov is also likely to make the rating cut. That leaves Naroditsky as a possible qualifier from this tournament.

A large "committee" landed another half-point behind, at 7-2. This included GMs Timur Garayev, Melik Khachiyan, Mark Paragua, Dmitry Gurevich, and Larry Kaufman; IMs Andranik Matikozyan, Enrico Sevillano, Salvijus Bercys, Michael Mulyar, Max Cornejo, and Mark Ginsburg; FMs Matthew Beelby, Jouaquin Banawa, and Jim Dean; and NMs Ankit Gupta, Giovanni Carretto, and Bryan Williams Paulsen. The latter six tied for Under 2400 honors. The top Expert, Vanessa West, also scored 7.

Five players tied for second Expert: Kevin Mo, Artur Safin, Jeff Phillips, Michael Bowersock, and Marian Nick Nita.

Datta Wins Record Smashing U.S. Junior Open

By Franc Guadalupe

The 2010 U.S. Junior Open held in Houston (July 23-25) was a record-smashing event, and NM Deepyaman Datta, a student at University of Texas at Austin, was the biggest winner. The event was held in the beautiful facilities of the Hilton Houston Hobby Airport, and drew 243 players from ten states. The 2006 Junior Open held in Dallas had the previous record with 215 players. This year's event had four sections: U-21, U-15, U-11 and U-8. Four masters and fourteen experts competed in the top division. In addition to the main event, there were Blitz, Bughouse, and Parents/Friends side events.

In the last round, Deepyaman defeated 14-year old expert Christopher Heung from Florida to secure clear first with 5.5/6 for the title, winner's plaque, and the $500 prize.

Datta will not be able to get the spot in the 2011 U.S. Junior Closed since he will not be under the age of 20 as of the age cut-off date for that event, so it will likely drop down to our young second place finisher (to be confirmed).

In the U-15, Co-Champions Jason Altschuler and Steven Chen, both from Texas, won their last games to finish in a tie for first place, with Jason winning the first place trophy on tiebreaks. Their meeting on Round Five resulted in a draw. In the U-11, Kesav Vishwanadha, rated 1904, was clear first with 5.5/6.

In the U-8 Division, top seed Emily Nguyen from Austin, rated 1476, had the only perfect score of the event, 6/6, winning the Championship by a full point.

Team trophies were awarded to both school and club teams. Westwood High School, from Austin, won the overall team championship in both the U-21 and U-15 Divisions, while the Houston Chess Club won the club titles in both divisions as well. In the U-11, the Houston Chess Club won the overall title and the first place trophy among clubs while Canyon Vista Middle School won first place among schools. The Austin Kids' Chess Club won the overall title in the U-8 Division, and T.H.Rogers from Houston won the school title.

The always exciting blitz event had two divisions. Bryce Tiglon, bested the other 30 participants in the U-11 Division to take the first place trophy back to Washington State. Robert Perez and Austin's Matthew Liu tied for first among the 18 participants in the Blitz U-21, with Robert, from Miami, winning the first place trophy on tiebreaks.

The exciting and always loud Bughouse competition had 13 teams. After three double rounds, the teams of Matthew Liu/Jonathan Chiang and Seth Thompson / Andrew Widener were tied with 6.0 points. Matthew and Jonathan won the play-off, 2-0, to take the first place trophies. Yiqun Xie won first place in the Parents and Friends event.

See rated results on the USCF MSA and check out the TCA website, www.texaschess.org, for complete results and winners.

Franc Guadalupe organized the event and was the Chief TD. He was assisted by Floor Chief Victor Flores and Binny Nanavati. Luis Salinas transmitted the games on the Monroi website and assisted on the floor as well.

Tommy He wins the gold in Under-10 at Pan-Am Youth

By Elizabeth Vicary

Results are in at the 2010 Pan American Youth Championship in Bento Gonçalves, Brazil (Aug. 1-8) Tommy He earned the Open Under 10 gold medal with 7.5/9 while Jonathan Chiang earned a bronze in the same section with 7/9. Evan Xiang tied for first with 8/9 in the Girls Under 12, taking silver on tiebreaks.

The experience should be very valuable for those who are participating in the World Youth, coming up in Halkidiki, Greece from October 19-31. Coach FM Aviv Friedman said the team had a lot of fun, "It is Brazil after all!" Friedman, and IM Armen Ambartsoumian, who also coached the team, are both FIDE Senior trainers. Langer, Ahn tie at Summer Open

Out-of-towners came away with most of the prizes at the Summer Open, held July 17-18 in San Antonio. Austinites Michael Langer and Ju Ahn tied for first with 3.5/4. Don Flournoy was the only local with an Open prize, sharing first U2100 with Andrew Widener and Derek Chang at 3.0.

The winner in the Reserve was nine-year-old Anthony Nguyen, who beat the venerable John Niven in the last round. Locals did somewhat better in this section: Daniel Lozano got a share of second, and Charles Davis, Dan Castillo and Michael Lange also won prizes.

J.P. Hyltin directed a combined field of 49 players for the San Antonio Chess Club. Selby Anderson assisted.

US Chess School comes to Dallas

By Elizabeth Vicary

If you were going to teach chess to the top ten-year-olds in the country for one week, where would you start? What would you cover? Would you run a boot camp of calculation exercises? Make them learn all the technical endgames they would never study on their own? Trace the development of chess through the games of the world champions? And how do you get ten 10-year-olds to concentrate for nine hours at a time? For me, as a chess teacher, these are interesting hypotheticals to speculate on, but for Greg Shahade, who organizes the US Chess Schools, they are questions he has to find new answers for all the time.

The latest US Chess School, a free five day training camp for the nation's top young players, organized three times each year by IM Greg Shahade, took place July 7-12 in Dallas. Each camp brings 8-12 students together with two of the best teachers in the country for five nine-hour days of serious (but fun) hard work.

The most recent group was the youngest ever, with an average age of only 10.4. Greg's answer to the second question (how to keep nine hours of rigorous chess fun and engaging) was to break up the study time as much as possible: to include frequent but brief doses of blitz, bughouse, problem solving, sports, and stories; to team-teach; to make everything into mini-competitions, both individual and team; and to take most of the chess material covered in the camp directly relevant from the participants' own games.

Most people agree that looking at your own games is the single most important way to improve, but how to do that in group lessons with students you don't know? At US Chess Schools 8 and 9 last summer, participants spent the afternoon of the first day playing training games; these games provided rich material for the group to analyze in the following days. But teachable moments are always a little hit or miss, and Greg's sense that these games weren't always exactly what he wanted led him to look for more efficient ways to use students' games to create the camps' curriculum.

What he has come to do is nothing short of amazing to me. Before camp starts, students are required to email all their recent slow-time-control games to Greg. He spends days combing through them, collecting instructive moments to group into lessons. For the Dallas camp, he received and analyzed 203 games. To keep the selection of positions "human," Greg does most of the analysis without an engine. (This has the interesting side benefit of encouraging the kids to question his answers, because they know it's possible he missed something and they are encouraged to challenge him.)

These moments then are grouped by theme (e.g. finding opponents' resources, saving worse positions, knight maneuvers), and made into competitions. Students work individually, getting points out of ten for the completeness of their written ideas and variations, but the competition is team-based, to build camaraderie and ensure that even the lower scoring students are motivated to try their hardest.

Here is a selection of positions on "finding your opponents' resources". (Solutions: p. 20.)

FM Aviv Friedman debuted as a USCS instructor for this camp. He's an excellent, very engaging, easy-to-listen to teacher.

Over the course of the week, I came to really appreciate one particular quality in Aviv as a teacher that I know I sometimes lack, and I think is easy to forget about: the importance of treating every student and every comment with intellectual respect. Students' answers given during the week-long camp ranged from moments of absolute brilliance to total eight-year-old silliness, but Aviv has a special way of responding to everyone with equanimity, focusing on the correct part of the answer, rather than the mistakes. Usually at these camps, there are one or two kids who are relatively quiet, sometimes just because of their personality, sometimes because the material is hard for them, but that wasn't the case in Dallas, and I give Aviv all of the credit for that. He has a talent for imparting self-confidence.

Aviv also has a treasure trove of prepared material. We all loved his whimsical warm-up positions.

Aviv also has many great classic games that illustrate typical methods of dealing with types of positions. We studied two positions involving isolated queen pawns -- how to play with and against them.

Kortchnoi, V - Karpov, A

World Championship match, 1981

Black to Move

Students were first asked to write down an evaluation of the position, choosing from the 7 notations, +, +/-, +/-, =, -/+, -/+, or + (white is winning, white is better, white is slightly better, equal, black is slightly better, etc.) and explain why. (put this as a caption for diagram outside answer) (inside answer: Black is better here because white has an isolated pawn, most of the minor pieces have been traded, and the square in front of the pawn (d5) is well controlled by black. Black's strategy here is to increase pressure on the d4 pawn, keeping control over the d5 square, and either to win it by attacking it more times than it can be defended, to use the pin on the d file to play e5, and/or to create a second weakness, in order to stretch white's defenses. As we looked over this game fragment, students were asked to guess most of black's moves.

This was a great illustration of how to play against an isolated pawn:

- Black tied white's pieces down by attacking the d5 pawn,
- He made sure to keep tight control over d5, preventing white from advancing the pawn with tactical tricks,
- Korchnoi played carefully, taking time to make sure none of his pawns were hanging (30...b6)
- He tripled on the d file and threatened e5, which forced white to open up his king (f4) to stop this.
- Black pressured white's queenside pawns and opened up a second front there, in order to misplace white's pieces,
- Korchnoi then took advantage of the off-sides nature of white's pieces to switch back and create a winning attack against the white king. (the principle of two weaknesses!)

Next we looked at an example of playing with the isolated pawn:

A quick back story about this position: it can also arise from the mainline (6... e6, 12...Nf6) Panov attack, but with white up a tempo (black's rook is usually still on e8. I had taught this game in one of my own classes at IS 318 one week on a Wednesday, and on the Saturday 4 days later had taken some of my students to the Marshall for a G/60 tournament. In the first round, my student Randy was paired up to an 1880, got the exact position we had looked at in class, but had not recognized it, played 15.Bg5 before d5, and went on to lose. Two rounds later, James Black, who was now watching Aviv show this game, was paired with the same person. We went over the trick quickly, his opponent played right into it, and James won easily. As Aviv got to this position, I looked over at James and we both started to laugh.

A model game for playing with an isolated pawn. Notice how white:

- Attacked the king
- Used the tactical motif d4-d5
- Switched the light squared bishop back and forth between its two useful diagonals, b1-h7 and a2-g8.
- Used all his pieces in the attack

Later that day, we saw this position from Mika's game

I like the move Rd8 quite a bit. In general you want to use major pieces to attack isolated pawns and trade minor pieces. This is quite similar to Karpov's ...Rb6 move against Korchnoi. Admittedly if you run Rybka, it believes that trading rooks is superior, but I think that from a practical standpoint Mika's decision was a good one and showed solid understanding.

I want to mention how enormously impressed I was by Mika Brattain. Most kids start their thinking process with a move that jumps out at them; they see a specific idea and turn on their internal engines. Mika's responses in class often started with a general observation about the position. They would sound like this: "If you are thinking in terms of a queenside attack, maybe Rf1" or "Black has an extra kingside pawn, so he ought to start advancing them."

The final lesson of the day was always "something light" from Aviv. Everyone's favorite was the alien story

Aviv's Alien Story

This is a story about an alien who came to earth and met a chess master. The alien was very curious about earth and earth people, so he asked the master many questions about everything. The chess master was in a big hurry to get to his job. He didn't want to stop and talk to the alien, but he was a very polite guy and so he slowed down to help him. The master answered question after question, until finally the alien asked,

"What do you do in your free time?"

Okay, the master wasn't crazy about answering, but you know, he's a very polite person, so he decided to say,

"Well, I am playing a certain game."

"What is the name of the game, sir?"

"It is called chess."

"Chess? On my planet we have no such game. Can you please tell me what it is?"

The master says to himself, oh my God, can you imagine what it is to explain to someone who has never heard about chess, what chess is? But again, the perfect host that he was, he started explaining that this is a board game, and he started telling the alien about the rules, the value of the pieces, how the pieces move, the chess board and the squares. The alien was fascinated like you couldn't believe. Never before had the master seen someone so enthusiastic about chess.

Eventually the alien said,

"You know what? I think I got it. I think I understand all the rules of the game. I think I understand all the value of the pieces. I'd like to play you a game."

The master rolled his eyes twice, because that's about the last thing he wanted to do. He thought by then he would have gotten rid of the unwelcome visitor. But again he is very polite; he is very nice; and he said, "Alright, I'll play you a game." Fine. So they play a game. It took a while, but after about an hour, an hour and a half, they reach this position.

The master is White, and the unwelcome visitor, the alien, has the black pieces. So White's going up the board; Black goes down.

As you can guess, in this position the master is winning easily. He's up a million pieces, and there's no really hope. As a matter of fact, the master looked at the position very carefully, and he all of a sudden got really pleased with himself. Because you know, there are a lot of moves that win here, maybe you can make a queen, maybe you can take the pawn on h2, all kinds of things. But he played the move Kc2 and he was extremely pleased with himself, because he realized that after the only move, which is promoting this pawn, he's going to play Bd4, checkmate.

Here the alien sank into a very long pause and the master was waiting and waiting and fidgeting, and he stood up, and was pacing, then eventually he got so impatient and he said,

"C'mon, you have only one legal move. It doesn't matter what move you make. It really is irrelevant. One is no better than another."

So the alien eventually, after some thought, said,

"Okay, I know what I want to do. h1 = King!"

The master said,

"No! What are you talking about? You can't do that!"

"Well, didn't you tell me that if I get my pawn to the 8th rank, I get any piece I want?"

"Yes, but not a king."

"Well, you didn't tell me that. You told me I could get any piece I want, and I want a king!"

The master knew that arguing about it was going to kill two more hours and he said to himself ok, I'm winning so much, it doesn't really matter. Let's just play on.

But then he had a brief dilemma. Because if he's going to go Bd4 checkmate, he's going to stalemate this king on h1, and how in the world is he going to explain about stalemate? What to do? After about forty minutes of thinking, he decided that he had a beautiful idea. He played a8, and made another black king! He promoted to a black king. Now we have three black kings!

Of course, the alien had nothing to say, because in the spirit of making a new king, you can make another king: no one can complain. And now, of course, here the alien had a very easy decision: this king on a1 can't move, this king on h1 can't move, so he went Kb8. The master went h7, and again, the alien has only one legal move, he went Ka8, and the master went h8=Q, checkmate, checkmate, checkmate!

Every camp includes a blitz tournament, and this one was won by Justus Williams with 8.5/10, followed by James Black (7.5/10), with Jonathan Chiang and Jeffrey Xiong tied for third (6.5). I was proud to come fifth, and especially happy to be outplayed by both of my students, James and Justus.

The US Chess School would not be possible without the generous sponsorship of Dr. Jim Roberts, in conjunction with the AF4C. Thanks also to our hosts, the Dallas Chess Club, especially Luis Salinas. For more information about the US Chess School, including how to be invited, see uschessschool.com.

The U.S. regularly boasts some of the top young talents in the world, yet somewhere along the way most of them either drop out of chess or fail to improve. Much of this lack of improvement can be attributed to the lack of support, training and guidance these young chess players are given. The US Chess School is hoping to change that, with a high level of chess training programs devoted to developing the strongest young players in the country.

Eight to twelve young players will receive five days of free training per session with one of the top grandmasters in the country. The only major expense the students will need to pay is the airfare and possibly lodging depending on the location. The training however is completely free of charge. The goals of this program are as follows:

1. Train our young players to their fullest potential
2. Create strong bonds of friendship between the top young American players
3. Provide the players with a mentor whom they can turn to for advice at any time
4. Instill the kind of work ethic that is necessary to becoming a top player.
5. Cultivate as many new American GM's as possible
6. Help to develop talent to lead our future Olympiad Teams

US Open (cont'd from p. 5)

In Class A, John Harwell, Steven Cooklev, Christopher Pascal, Roland Feng and Kesav Viswanadha scored 6-3 to split that class prize.

Top B players Solomon Ruddell and Daniel Shaw scored 5.5. Five-pointers Agata Bykovtsev, Vic Alfaro, Carlen Melville, and Edward Dennis Collins, at 5-4, split the rest of the money. Class C honors went to Anthony Mack, Kevin Qian, and Bryan Huang, with 4.5. Poker star Allen Cunningham was in a group of nine with 4 points for the remaining money, despite having to fold his hand in each of the last three rounds.

Top E player, Ryan Perkovich actually outscored the D players, garnering four points (both classes offered the same prizes). Kyle Perkovich, John Yu, Danial Asaria, Alonzo Sanchez, Harini Balakrishnan, took D honors with 3.5. Rounding out the top winners, Trevor Stearman and Alvin Cao tied for second E at 3.5, and Erwin Urrutia was best Unrated with 4.

The Open drew 474 players, of whom five were re-entries, two were house players, and eight were GMs who played free per USCF policy. Over 92% of the projected $50,000 prize fund was paid out. (Winners of the two special prizes in memory of Jerry Hanken, donated by Neil Bershad, will be announced August 18.)

The Open was a great chess experience for serious players as always, with plenty of side events. Organizer Pat Knight Smith and Chief TD Franc Guadalupe and his staff working hard to ensure optimal conditions for the players. But please let this writer (a player - I won't be discussing my result in this tournament - and sometime TD and organizer) mention one annoyance that was insufficiently discouraged - forfeits. Short of a cell phone with an annoying ringtone going off during time pressure, few things are more disturbing (to me, anyway) than seeing someone sit for an hour waiting for an opponent who didn't have the courtesy to tell the TDs he was withdrawing. It happened on 12 of the 194 boards in the last round - over 6%! (None of the 12 victims were re-paired.) Let's all be considerate of others and respect the game!

I hope to see many of our readers at the 112th Annual U.S. Open, July 30-Aug. 7 next year at the Hyatt Regency in Orlando, Florida, even closer to Disney World than the Irvine Hyatt is to Disneyland!

Ivanov wins US Senior, Kaufman advances to World Senior

by IM Larry Kaufman

The US Senior Open (Aug. 23-28, Boca Raton, FL) finished much as expected, with top rated GM Alexander Ivanov taking first and the US Championship slot with 5.5 out of 6. Ivanov finished the tournament off with a win over IM Emory Tate.

Second rated GM Sergey Kudrin took second with 5, and the third rated player (myself) took fourth on tiebreak at 4.5 plus the US spot in the World Senior (age 60+) in Italy.

Third place with 5 out of 6 was taken by FM Luis Barredo of Cuba, who defeated the higher-rated FM LaRota in the last round. Consequently a playoff game between Kudrin and Barredo was played to decide who qualifies for the US

Championship in case Ivanov gets in by rating. Kudrin got 30 minutes and White, Barredo 20 minutes and Black plus draw odds. Kudrin won, and only afterwards was it realized that the game was pointless, as Barredo being Cuban is ineligible for the US Championship anyway!

As for myself, I played carefully to hold the draw in the last round against Kudrin to get the World Senior slot as best scorer over 60.

However Leonid Bondar, rated only 2006 and 70 years old, came out of nowhere to win his last three games and reach a tie with me at 4.5 for the spot. So we also had to have a play-off game. The two players submitted sealed bids for Black, with the lower bid winning. I bid 20 minutes (White gets 30), which also was the winning bid in the Kudrin game. Bondar really wanted the draw odds, as he bid a ridiculous FIVE minutes! Even allowing for the five second delay, this was quite silly and I won easily. So it looks like I'll be back for my third consecutive World Senior with (most) expenses paid. It's in northern Italy starting late in October.

The other 4.5 scorer was IM Joseph Bradford, who told me that he held a 2500+ rating for over 20 years but is now in the low 2400s.

As for the other IMs, Emory Tate finished out of the money with 4 points, having lost to the two top GMs. He blamed his losses on the fast time control and on a bedbug infestation at his hotel (not the Marriott!). IM John Watson withdrew after four rounds citing eye trouble.

As for the age bracket prizes, Ivanov gets 50-54, Bradford 55-59, I get 60-64, Denis Strenzwilk got 65-69, Bondar got 70-74, and the amazing Dan Mayers won the 75 and up category at age 87!

The tournament was well-run by Jon Haskel.
